Two U.S. servicemembers pull Japanese man from burning wreck | 'one,' avoid

Stars and Stripes

TOKYO - Two servicemembers assigned to Stars and Stripes in Tokyo helped rescue a Japanese man from a burning van Thursday afternoon, according to evewitness reports

Lt. Col. Dan Todd, commander. and Master Sgt. Isaac Morrow. first sergeant, were traveling on the Chuo highway when they spotted a van smashed against the median on the opposite side of the road. After vaulting the divider they joined a Japanese man in trying to free the driver from the wreck.

Todd said the driver was convulsing and appeared to be in some sort of seizure in the locked vehicle. The accelerator was slammed to the floor and with the engine screaming, the spinning tires threw debris all over the highway, Todd said.

Todd and Morrow couldn't smash out the windows with a rub. ber mallet the other Jananese man provided. But a truck driver also stopped to help.

toward a wrecked van, jumping over the median," said Jun Shige zumi, who lives in Tokyo, "I followed them with a crowbar that I happened to have in my car after I saw them trying hard to open the window.

Trying not to further injure the driver, Todd smashed out the passenger side rear window and both he and Morrow tried to reach the door lock switch.

Morrow said during the commotion, the driver stopped convuls-ing and stared at them through the window, apparently in shock.

One of the Japanese men smashed out the front seat passenger window. Todd, seeing flames crawling from under the hood into the van's cab, climbed through the window and unfastened the driver's seatbelt. With Morrow's help, they got him out and away from the car.

"I thought he was going to burn to death," Todd said. "I knew we had to act quick.

Morrow also attempted to keep the traffic as far from the wreck possible on the narrow two-lane highway.

"I was afraid it was going to blow up and I wanted to minimize casualties," Morrow said.

As they walked the driver down the highway, the van exploded, sending flames and black clouds of smoke billowing into the air.

"Pieces and parts were flying everywhere," Todd said. Shigezumi said he was impressed

"Merely standing near a burning car is scary enough but the American entered the burning car to save a life," he said via a phone interview late Thursday af-

Toshio Ishiki, a Tokyo Metropolitan Police Expressway Patrol Division spokesman, confirmed the accident occurred at about 1:35 p.m. He said the 46-year-old driver was changing lanes when he was struck from behind by another vehicle. Ishiki said the driver was taken to a nearby hospital but officials there declined to comment on the driver's condition early Thursday evening. Todd, who flew as a KC-135 navigator for 10 years, said he had practiced plenty of emergency response scenarios but always wondered how he would perform in a real situation.

"There was no doubt in my mind." Todd said. "I had to take care of the situation right away .. had to put away the fear. Chivomi Sumida contributed to this the 'jerk'

BY JENNIFER H. SVAN Stars and Strings

MISAWA AIR BASE, Japan -Love is blind, so the saying goes, but it doesn't have to be

Starting next week, the Family Support Center here is offering a five-series class, "How to Avoid Marrying a Jerk," for single adults and parents of teenagers who may need advice in the dating game.

Though experts say there are warning signs that a potential partner actually may be a jerk, FSC's Mary Lassalle-Adams said the goal of the class isn't to stop people from getting married

"It's getting more in tune with your partner so you can have a stronger relationship," said Lassalle-Adams, a community source technician who will be leading the class. "It's just another tool that folks can take with them to help them make better decisions

The class materials come from Jon Van Epp, a marriage and family counselor in Ohio. His premarital relationship program about avoiding jerks at the altar is taught by church youth groups, schools and singles ministries in the United States, according to Epp's Web site, www.nojerks.com. The program also has reached seven countries and more than 250 military bases, which tend to have large singles populations.

Lassalle-Adams said the class will cover five areas people should explore before marriage: Family background, quality of the person's conscience, compatibility, relationship skills and patterns of past relationships.

Among other questions are those touching on finances, spirituality, expressing affection, trust and handling emotions.

"A lot of young folks jump into marriage," she said. "This is a way to explore some things, think about the relationship you're in, before getting married. You don't want to go into the unknown and learn everything (about spouse) after you're married."

The first class meets from 9 a.m. to noon Tuesday at the Family Support Center; four more classes are to be held once a week at the same time and place. Sign up by Monday at FSC or call DSN

Arnn students learn about earthquake safety

He learned about Sagamihara's earthquake truck after attending a city earthquake preparedness event last year. The city loaned the truck to the base along with a smoke house, which models a house fire. Children crawled through the small smoky tent to practice covering their mouths and staying low in a fire "It's foggy, I don't like this smoke," one

U.S. civilians working in Iraq are making big sacrifices, but most people don't know it

The sting of being overlooked

By KIRSTEN SCHARNBERG Chicago Tribune

ASTORIA, Ore. - Having no idea of the significance of his de-livery, the FedEx driver hurriedsed five massive boxes containing everything Anthony Stramiello had possessed in Iraq onto his widow's front porch.

Roberta Stramiello was jolted from the living room sofa by the

"I'd better go see what's going on out there," she said apprehen-sively. The last time strangers had been milling about her front porch — on the evening of Dec. — they had been there to tell her that her husband was dead.

It is perhaps revealing that the personal effects of Anthony Stramiello, a 61-year-old construction contractor who had been working in the Iraqi city of Mosul at the time of his death, were returned to the United States with so little ceremony on a recent February morning.

In the nearly two years since the war began in Iraq, at least 232 civilians working on U.S. military. and reconstruction contracts have been killed there, many in violent but largely overlooked slayings, according to a report issued to Congress several weeks ago.

Because of difficulties in ac counting for this virtual army of private contractors in Iraq — many of whom are working in supply, logistics and even combat roles integral to the military's mission — the death toll actually could be far higher.

"The number of civilian contractors who have been killed in Iraq is far greater than any other group over there other than the U.S. military itself," said Peter Singer, an expert on national security and Iraq military contracts at the Brookings Institution.

Below the radar

Yet aside from brief moments of attention after high-profile kidnappings, beheadings or bloody ambushes caught on videotape, the public's focus rarely has been on these at-risk civilian workers.

Few Americans seem aware these contractors are dying at a rate never before seen in American military history, and the bulk of the public's support and sympathy remains directed toward the families of the more than 1,400 military personnel killed on duty in Iraq

"[Contractors] don't come home to funerals with full military honors or flag-draped coffins or bugles playing taps. Their families don't get letters from the president "Stramiello said "Louess I didn't feel that way personally for me, my husband is gone either way — but I can understand how others might feel the sting of

The best method the U.S. Department of Labor has for tracking the number of contractors killed in Iraq is to monitor how many insurance claims are made under the Defense Base Act a law that requires employees who work on national or international government contracts to be provided insurance, including compensation benefits in the event of their deaths. But some families may not know they are entitled to such benefits and never officially report their family member's

Civilian contractors install a gunner's shield atop a Humvee from the 24th Marine Expeditionary Unit at an armor installation facility in Kuwait last July.

Adding to the difficulty of monitoring how many contractors die organization keeping an official tally of the number of civilians working there. Such an accounting would be difficult because the workers come from dozens of different countries despite the fact they all are employed by com nies that have been awarded U.S. military and reconstruction con-

In from the Cold War

Iraq's battlefield actually was shaped most pivotally by events of the previous century. After the end of the Cold War, militaries around the world began to downsize. But at the same time, the world began to change — and destabilize in some places

Whole regions of the world were becoming so volatile that their governments were looking to hire professionals to protect them from violent separatists Globalization was bringing Western companies into these same unsettled parts of the world, and they, too, needed security consult-ants and protection. And Islamic fundamentalism and terrorism linked to warfare in other words, the corporate evolution of the age-old practice of mercenar-Singer, who is considered ies," the nation's foremost expert on the topic, writes in an upcoming issue of Foreign Affairs maga-

In 2002, as it became clear the country was headed toward war, a number of factors all but guar anteed that an unprecedented number of civilian workers would be required to pull it off, Singer

The war would be more politically palatable if fewer troops were deemed necessary to deploy, he argued. Army Chief of Staff Gen. Eric Shinseki, in fact, was pressed into retirement from his job after he predicted that an invasion of Iraq would require "several hundred thousand" troops, not the less than 150,000 United States eventually

Into the breach

When the war began in March 2003, civilian contractors filled any gap between bodies deployed and bodies needed. But outsourcing this work to private workers did not come cheaply - or without risk.

Where once a low-paid private first class might be assigned to serve food in the mess ball, now civilian contractors could demand high wages to take those jobs. Where soldiers could be court-martialed for refusing to carry out an order, civilian contractors could refuse to take missions — delivering fuel or ammunition, for example - if they believed they were too dangerous.

"I think there is a significant question as to whether very heavy use of civilian contractors is cost-effective," said Scott Silli-man, the executive director of the Center on Law. Ethics and National Security at Duke Universi-"In addition to that, there is the loss of control. But it does accomplish the objective of allowing the personnel in uniform to be assigned to the combat-specific, trigger-pull roles in-stead of using them for logistics and support.

Silliman, a former Air Force judge advocate who supervised deployment of all Air Force attorneys to the 1991 Gulf War, worries even more about the legal issues that may result from the presence of civilian contractors in Iraq.

"There are two important things to consider," he said. "The vulnerability of these civilians and the accountability of these ci-vilians. If they are hurt or killed there, what legal protections are afforded them? If they commit crimes, can they be prosecuted?"

Back at the Victorian mansion she and her husband had been painstakingly rehabbing before he went to Iraq, Roberta Stramiello spends little time in the rooms the couple already had finished wandering through the ones that remain torn apart. She constantly points out what still needs to be done.

"I've done everything I can in this room," she says sadly, "the rest of the work I need Tony to After the FedEx driver left on

The body of a fourth, Sgt. Rene Knox Jr., 22, had been recovered from a submerged Humvee. Patrolwithout headlights around 4:30 a.m., Knox had overshot a turn. His vehicle tumbled down a concrete embankment and settled upside down in the frigid water

During the harrowing day-long mission to recover the bodies of the Humvee's three occupants on Feb. 13. an Air Force firefighter also drowned. Five U.S. soldiers were treated for hypothermia. For five hours, three Navy SEAL divers searched the canal before their tanks ran out of oxygen.

Mark McKnight, commander of the 1st Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division, which had overall responsibility for the unit in the accident, his eyes tearing Pfc. Russell Nahvi, 23, of Arlington, Texas, a medic whose platoon was involved in the accident, said he arrived in Iraq this month with preconceptions about the Iraqi forces. The actions of the Iraqis that Sunday "changed my mind for how I felt about these guys," he said. "I have a totally different perspective now. They were just so into it. They were crying for us. They were saying we were their brothers, too.

The tragedy on Feb. 13 began when 11 soldiers from the 3rd Platoon, Charlie Company, of the 5th Battalion, 7th Cavalry Regiment. set out from Camp Paliwoda, 50 miles north of Baghdad. The Humvee was upside down in the middle of the 50-foot-wide canal. None of the three soldiers appeared to be alive. But the pla-toon raced to get them out of the Two Black Hawk helicopters arrived. They carried Air Force fire-fighters from the 732nd Expedionary Civil Engineer Squadron, dispatched from nearby Logistical Support Area Anaconda. (Air Force officers declined to discuss details of the incident because of a pending investigation.) Within moments, the airmen were also strug gling for their lives, the soldiers said. Neither airman could get out of the canal; one clutched desper ately at the embankment but couldn't get hold, the soldiers said. He slowly began to float away.

The Americans had not called the Iraqis for assistance. About 7 a.m., Sgt. Maj. Maitham Hadi Naouma of the Iraqi army's 203rd Battalion woke up to see U.S. Apache attack helicopters circling the western edge of Balad. He radi oed the battalion commander, Col.

They've left their fami-lies, their children. When we get hurt, they help treat us and take (us) to hospitals. If we can give them something back, just a little, we can show our thanks.

While the SEALs combed the canal, the Iraqis went to a Balad auto repair shop and built their own piece of dredging equipment. The tool they created looked like a 20-foot length of rusted bed frame, with 11 curved pieces of rebar hastily welded to it.

The Iraqis returned to the canal in the early afternoon and began working both sides of the canal in 10-man teams. They lowered the tool into the water with ropes, dredged, then dredged some more.

A U.S. military truck pulled up with food for the rescuers. The Iraqis hadn't eaten all day. The U.S. soldiers lined up at the truck, heaping their plates with food. Instead of feeding themselves, they fanned out, distributing the plates

At least five other Iraqi police were killed in separate attacks across the insurgent-wracked country, including another suicide car bomb assault on a police convoy in Iskandariyah, 30 miles south of the capital.

Two roadside bombs in Qaim, near the Syrian border, also killed four Iraqi National Guardsmen, Iraqi Lt. Col. Abid Ajab Al-Salmani said.

In the capital, gunmen opened fire on a bakery, killing two people and wounding a third, police said. Several blasts echoed through the city at midday, but their cause was not immediately known.

U.S. deaths in Iraq

The Associated Dec

As of Wednesday, Feb. 23, 2005, at least 1,484 members of the U.S. military have died since the beginning of the Iraq war in March 2003, according to an Associated Press count. At least 1,126 died as a result of hostile action, according to the Defense Department. The figures include four military civilians.

The AP count is eight higher than the Defense Department's tally, last updated at 10 a.m. EST Wednesday.

The British military has reported 86 deaths; Italy, 20; Ukraine, 18; Poland, 16; Spain, 11; Bulgaria, seven; Stovakia, three; Estonia, Thailand and the Netherlands, two each; and Denmark, El Salvador, Hungary, Latvia and Kazakhstan one death each.

Since May 1, 2003, when President Bush declared that major combat operations in Iraq had ended, 1,346 U.S. military members have died, according to AP's count. That includes at least 1,017 deaths resulting from hostile action, according to the military's numbers.

Army revising procedures, policies at detention centers

Maj. Gen. Donald Ryder, the Army's provost marshal gen-

Pope has surgery to insert breathing tube

Japan may put the squeeze on N. Korea

BY AUDREY MCAVOY The Associated Press

TOKYO - Could denying the gourmand dictator Kim Jong II sweet Japanese melons push North Korea back to the negotiating table? Or would forcing upper-crust North Korean omen to give up their favorite Japanese lipstick work? Japanese lawmakers are stretching their imaginations for ways to squeeze concessions out of North Korea amid mounting frustration over Pyongyang's failure to disclose all it knows about the Japanese it kidnapped in the 1970s and

"We could stop the melon trade. Then Kim Jong II wouldn't be able to eat delicious melons and he would be furious," said Ichita Yamamoto, a ruling party lawmaker "He would ask 'Where are my melons?' "

Prohibiting exports of fruit and cosmetics to North Korea are among the more innocuous, and primarily symbolic, steps Yamamoto and his ruling Liberal Democratic Party colleagues have considered.

More seriously, they have suggested blocking all trade with the impoverished state and banning North Korean ships from Japanese ports.

So far, Japanese Prime Minister Junichiro Koizumi has resisted punishing Pyongyang, suggesting economic sanctions could disrupt already troubled multilateral talks on dismantling the North's nuclear weapons pro-gram. Critics add that penalties would be pointless unless imposed in unison with other countries, especially the North's two biggest trading partners: China and South Korea.

But Vamamoto and his allies say sanctions would twist North Korea's arm enough to bring it back to the negotiating table and give in to Tokyo's demands.

Clams are sold at a Tokyo fish market Thursday, Aside from blocking melon shipments, Tokyo could pinch the North Korean ruling class by halting Japan's $42.6 million in annual imports of North Korean clams.

Tokyo governor beats lawsuit over allegedly sexist remarks

BY MARI YAMAGUCHI The Associated Press

TOKYO - Tokyo's outspoken governor on Thursday beat a lawsuit in which he was accused of denigrating women past their child-rearing years, hinting that he agreed with the opinion it was "almost a crime" for them to go on living.

The Tokyo District Court rejected a demand that Gov. Shintaro Ishihara pay damages to 131 female plaintiffs for the remarks. The plaintiffs — teachers, company employees and housewives ages 20-70 who either live or work in Tokyo — filed the suit in December 2002.

They demanded that Ishihara publicly apologize and provide compensation totaling $135,000 for comments made in a November 2001 magazine interview.

Court official Makoto Muraya ma confirmed that the demands had been rejected, but refused to give further details.

In the "Weekly Ladies" inter-

Court rejects war laborers' demands

TOKYO - A Japanese court Thursday rejected a claim for compensation by a group of South Korean women who were allegedly forced to work during World War II at a Japanese aircraft factory run by Mitsubishi Heavy Industries Ltd.

The plaintiffs are not eligible to seek compensation under a 1965 bilateral treaty between Japan and South Korea, Nagoya District Court Judge Kunio Sakuma ruled, Kyodo News agency reported. It did not elaborate on details of the treaty.

The plaintiffs - seven women and a relative of another who died - had demanded $2.29 million in compensation and an apology from the Japanese government and Mit-subishi Heavy. They also demanded Mitsubishi pay the

The seminar is part of the growing effort to establish a disaster warning system in the Indian Ocean by mid-2006.

Japan and the United States will start providing tsunami warnings to countries around the Indian Ocean next month as a stopgap measure.

The seminar came ahead of a U.N.-sponsored meeting in Paris starting next week focusing on how to design the southern Asian warning system. Officials hope to extend that system globally by 2007.

Unions sue Rumsfeld over Defense's labor management system

By Jane M. Von Bergen

The Philadelphia Inquirer

PHILADELPHIA — Ten labor unions representing 300,000 civilian employees of the Department of Defense, filed a federal lawsuit Wednesday against Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld, saying Rumsfeld's department has refused to negotiate changes in its labor management system in violation of the law

The suit, filed in U.S. District Court in Washington, comes after months of protests by the unions over proposals for a new National Security Personnel System, which was authorized for development by Congress in November 2003.

The unions say the system, which seeks flexibility in hiring and assigning workers for security reasons, is using threats to security as a way to diminish the unions' ability to advocate for workers.

The Department of Defense's Web site said the new system is needed to replace outmoded human resource practices and better support the department's "critical national security mission"

Bradley Bunn, NSPS deputy program executive officer, would not comment directly on the suit. Former terrorists seek legitimacy

By KATHERINE SHRADER
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — One-time members of a terrorist organization are hiding in the United States — in plain sight.

The organization's former U.S. representative freely walks the streets and has a contract with Fox News as a foreign affairs analyst. Lawmakers write letters on the group's behalf. And former intelligence officials say the group maintains contacts in defense circles, although the Pentagon denies it.

A cult to some and freedom fighters to others, the National Council of Resistance of Iran and its affiliate groups typify the gray areas in the often black-and-white world of the war on terror.

While they've been designated foreign terrorist organizations by the State Department, the groups' members still maneuver between the restrictions aimed at disabling them.

The former U.S. representative for the council, Alireza Jafarzadeh, says the U.S. government listed his moderate elements within the Iranian government. He's hoping the Bush administration will lift the terrorist designation.

"I see increasingly more voices being raised against this designation in different parts within the administration and outside the administration," said Jafarzadeh, who notes that his group no longer exists in the United States but his free-speech rights allow him to discuss policies it once advocated.

"The more serious people get about Iran, the more they are against the designation," he said.

The mission of the National Council and its military wing — the Mujahedin-e-Khalq or MEK — is to over-throw the Iranian regime, an aim increasingly in line with the Bush administration. Yet the administration has stopped short of calling for regime change.

In last month's State of the Union speech, President Bush called Iran "the world's primary state sponsor of terror." In Europe this week, he maintained the pressure, calling suggestions that the United States is preparing to attack Iran "simply ridiculous," but quickly adding, "having said that, all options are on the table."

Court rules sperm use was not theft

CHICAGO — An appeals court said a man can press a claim for emotional distress after learning a former lover had used his sperm to have a baby. But he can't claim theft, the ruling said, because the sperm were hers to keep.

The ruling Wednesday by the Illinois Appellate Court sends Dr. Richard O. Phillips' distress case back to trial court.

Phillips accuses Dr. Sharon Irons of a "calculated, profound personal betrayal" after their affair six years ago, saying she secretly kept semen after they had oral sex, then used it to get preenant.

He said he didn't find out about the child for nearly two years, when Irons filed a paternity lawsuit. DNA tests confirmed Phillips was the father, the court papers state.

Some say advertisers exploit a time meant to honor contributions of black Americans

The Washington Post

Judge reschedules trial in civil rights killings

PHILADELPHIA, Miss. — The trial of a reputed Klansman in the 1964 slayings of three civil rights workers has been delayed to April 19, in part to allow the defense time to review tips received as part of the reopened investigation.

Circuit Judge Marcus Gordon issued the ruling in the Edgar Ray Killen murder case during a brief hearing Thursday. He also said the three-week delay would allow more time to prepare a questionnaire for potential jurors.

Killen, an 80-year-old part-time preacher and former lumber mill operator, was indicted Jan. 6 for the 1964 murders of James Chaney, Michael Schwerner and Andrew Goodman, who were in this rural area helping blacks register to vote. Killen, who remains free on bond, had been scheduled to stand trial March 2s.

which the black boxes that record events leading up to aircraft crashes must hold more data and have a more reliable power supply under a plan outlined Thursday by the Federal Aviation Administration.

Federal safety regulators have long urged the FAA to adopt stricter requirements for the black boxes after the devices failed to yield use information during the investigations of several fatal arrivarier accidents, including the 1998 crash of Swissair Flight 111 off the coast of Halifax, Nova Scotia, and the 1999 crash of Egyptair Flight 990 off the Nantucket coast.

"Good data is often the Rosetta Stone to deciphering what happened in an aircraft incident and what could happen in an accident," said FAA Administrator Marion Blakey.

The new rules require cockpit voice recorders, which record pilots' conversations, to retain at least two hours of audio and have a 10-minute backup power source. They are now only required to record 15 to 30 minutes of sound and don't have to have backup

Doug Wead allowed journalists to hear and broadcast the tapes in the past week as he promoted his new book on presidential parents.

But he said he canceled plans to be on "Hardball" on MSNBC Tuesday night to talk about his regrets because "it would only add to the distraction I have caused to the president's important and historic work.

"Contrary to a statement that I made to the New York Times, I have come to realize that personal relationships are more important than history," Wead wrote in a letter to the show's host, Chris Matthews, that MSNBC released to the public on Wednesday

"I am asking my attorney to direct any future proceeds from the book to charity and to find the best way to vet these tapes and get them back to the president to whom they belong.

"History can wait."

On the tapes, recorded over the course of the two years before Bush became the Republican presidential nominee, Bush discusses strategy for his presidential run and appears to acknowledge past drug use.

He says he will refuse to answer questions about using LSD, cocaine and marijuana because "I don't want any kid doing what I tried to do 30 years ago

Thompson's ashes might be shot out of a cannon

The Associated Press

DENVER - Hunter S. Thompson, the "gonzo journalist" with a penchant for drugs, guns and flame-thrower prose, might have one more salvo in store for everyone: Friends and relatives want to blast his ashes out of a cannon, just as he wished

"If that's what he wanted, we'll see if we can pull it off," said historian Douglas Brinkley, a friend of Thompson's and now the family's spok

Thompson, who shot himself to death at his Aspen-area home Sunday at 67, said several times he wanted an artillery send-off for his remains. "There's no question, I'm sure that's what he would want," said Mike Cleverly, a longtime friend and neighbor. "Hunter truly loved that kind of Colorado fireworks impresario Marc Williams said it's doable

"Oh, sweet. I'd love to. I would so love to," said Williams, 44, owner of Night Musick Inc. in subur-ban Denver and a fan of Thompson's writing.

Thompson's wife, Anita, and son, Juan, are looking into the cannon scenario, said Brinkley, who has edited some of Thompson's work

In comments published Thursday, members of Thompson's family said the writer discussed committing suicide at least 10 years before he took his

"I've known for many, many years that this is how Hunter would go," Juan Thompson told the Rocky Mountain News in Thursday's editions. "It was just a question of when. This was a big sur-prise and I didn't expect it to be now, but the means was exactly as we expected. Brinkley also said Thompson did not take his life "in a moment of haste or anger or despondency" but probably planned his suicide well in advance because of declining health. The author of books including "Fear and Loathing in Las Vegas" was in pain from a host of problems that included a broken leg and a hip replacement. "I think he made a conscious decision that he had an incredible run of 67 years, lived the way he wanted to, and wasn't going to suffer the indigni-ties of old age," Brinkley said. "He was not going to let anybody dictate how he was going to die.'

Thompson had spent an intimate weekend with his son, daughter-in-law and young grandson, the spokesman said.

"He was trying to really bond and be close to the family" before his suicide, Brinkley said. "This was not just an act of irrationality. It was a very pre-planned act.

If the Thompson job were his, Williams said, he would probably blast the ashes from a 12-inch diameter mortar 800 feet into the sky. Then a second, window-rattling blast would scatter them amid a blossom of color 600 feet across.

Coroner: Dogs, baby swings don't mix

Saturday, February 26, 2005

The Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS - Rocking your baby to sleep in a mechanical swing may trigger a deadly attack on the child by the family dog, a coroner warns.

At least two such deaths have been documented in Maryland over a four-year period, Dr. Albert Y. Chu of the state's medical examiner's office said Wednesday at a meeting in New Orleans of the American Academy of Forensic Sciences.

The back-and-forth motion may activate the dog's instinct to chase prey, he said.

"Think about dogs chasing cars or tennis balls. They can't control their behavior - they just go," he

In 2003, a 2-week-old boy was dragged from his swing and killed by the family's pit bull in Baltimore after the baby's mother left him to answer the front door. In Edgemere, Md., in 1999, a 3-month-old boy was mauled to death as his parents slept in another room

An Associated Press check of online news archives found at least one more death - that of an 18-day-old girl in Tampa, Fla., in 2000 after her mother left the room to warm a bottle for her and at least two nonfatal attacks around the country in the past few years.

In one of those cases, in Summerville, S.C., in 2003, the dog lunged for the baby and bit her in front of the child's mother

In 2000, Sabrina Williamson of Peru, Ind., had gone to the store while her husband napped in another room, not far from 9-week-old Alex. She walked back in and found her husband wrestling their pit bull off the baby. They had had the dog eight years, since Alex's brother was 4.

"I think it could be a key factor. Our dog had never been mean towards a child before," she said in a telephone interview.

The baby's face was bitten and bloody, and his collarbone was broken and protruding from his shoulder, police said.

More blacks, Latinos jailed

AUSTIN - More than 70 percent of inmates in Texas prisons are black or Latino, nearly doubling their percentage of the general population, according to a report released Thursday.

The report by the Washington, D.Cbased Justice Policy Institute found that blacks are sent to prison at a rate five times higher than whites in Texas. Latinos were incarcerated at twice the rate of whites, the report said

Gary Bledsoe, state director of the Texas National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said spending more money on education and health care would help people avoid the crimes that send them to prison.

Father stabs kids, kills self

COLUMBUS, Ga. - A father fatally stabbed his two young children and seriously wounded three others with a hunting knife before committing suicide by slitting his own throat, police said. The father, Clarence Lacey Moore, 24, and the five children were found in a home in south Columbus after Wednesday's attack, police said.

Beverly Moore, the mother of all five children, was not injured, said police Maj Russell Traino. It was not immediately clear whether the three wounded children were related to Clarence Moore.

Pa. trooper fatally shoots self

LANCASTER, Pa. - A veteran state trooper fatally shot himself Wednesday, four days after authorities searched his home for items "related to child pornography," a state police official said.

Trooper Arthur J. Mizzoni, 49, was found dead in his pickup truck in the parking lot outside his barracks in Ephrata, about 60 miles northwest of Philadelphia.

Clay Township Police searched Mizzoni's home Saturday and seized "numerous items," said state police Capt. Steven McDaniel, the troop commander. They included computer equipment and supplies, pornographic magazines, advertisements and newspaper clippings with pictures of children, and Polaroid photos of children, according to court papers.

Hunter fined $18M for fire

EDDING, Calif. - A lost hunter who started a forest fire in northern California while trying to keep warm was ordered to pay $18.2 million restitution. The fire in the Mendocino National Forest burned 6,058 acres and cost $33 million to suppress, authorities said. The restitution covers the U.S. Forest Service's cost of fighting the fire and restoring the burned area, prosecutors said.

Jason Hoskey, 26, of Willows, lit a campfire when he got lost hunting on Sept. 27, 2003. The fire spread after he fell asleep.

Flames had been banned in the area because of extreme fire danger. Prosecutors said Hoskey also violated the ban by smoking several cigarettes.

Johnson, a third-termer from rural Illinois, agrees that there has been "an exponential increase in the level of rancor, in the level of acrimony" that he says is a disservice to both the Congress and the country.

Reasonable compromise is difficult, he said, citing the current debate over Social Security reform where "one party is telling the other they are atavistic socialists from the 1930s and the other party is saving they are trying to starve old people

Israel and Johnson, in announcing the formation of the Center Aisle Caucus, say they hope to reduce partisan warfare through modest measures such as holding more informal briefings on issues and unscripted after-hours discussions, and giving minority Democrats more time to express their views.

Johnson said they will also be "blowing the whistle when members are unnecessarily disrespectful."

Israel noted that some of their ideas

The Associated Press WASHINGTON - It isn't hard to understand why few in Washington are taking President Bush's proposal to kill or cut 154 programs very seriously. Just listen to members of his own party. "It ought to be expanded, not eliminated," Arizona Sen. Jon Kyl says of aid to states with imprisoned criminal aliens, a $300 million program Bush wants to

"We'll fight it with everything that's in us," Pennsylvania Rep John Peterson says of the president's plan to end vocational education subsidies running $1.2 billion annually. Bush proposed the cuts this month as part of his $2.57 trillion budget for 2006. He wants to trim nonsecurity programs - except automatically paid benefits like Medicare — by an overall 1 percent from this year's levels, the first such reduction proposed in a presidential budget since President Reagan was in office Of Bush's 154 targets, the Education Department would suffer the most losses: He would kill 48 of its programs worth about $4.3 billion and cut two others.

They range from vocational education aid distributed to states and communities nationwide to the B.J. Stupak Olympic scholar-

The program is named for the lawmaker's late son. Another nine Justice Department programs worth $1.5 billion would be erased, including grants for hiring local police officers and for communications equipment.

Bush's rationale for the cuts is the need to control relentless federal deficits that the White House expects to set a third straight record this year, hitting $427 billion. He also would slow the growth of the Pentagon's budget and pluck savings from Medicaid, farm aid, veterans payments and other benefit programs.

Many interest groups and members of Congress, including plenty of the president's fellow Republicans, think what's unwise are his proposed cuts. That's why his plan to save $15.3 billion by eliminating 99 programs and cutting 55 others faces bleak prospects.

"We want to be fiscally responsible." House Agriculture Committee Chairman Bob Goodlatte, R-Va., said of the 28 agriculture programs Bush would cut or abol-"But we also want to make sure American agriculture re-mains competitive."

"Will we get everything we want? Probably not, but by doing this we help assure overall spending isn't growing so fast" that it hinders Bush's effort to control deficits, said White House budget office spokesman Chad Kolton

Off-color video gets official criticized

Juvenile justice chief showed Chris Rock skit in meeting with NAACP

BY BRENDAN FARRINGTON

TALLAHASSEE Fla - Six black lawmakers called for the removal of the head of the state's juvenile justice department for showing a video by comedian Chris Rock at a meeting with civil rights activ-

One lawmaker called the black comedi-an's 4-minute skit — "How To Not Get Your Ass Kicked By The Police" — "absolutely racist.'

A member of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People who attended the viewing last July said no one complained.

The skit, which came from Rock's former HBO comedy show, was shown in the office of Juvenile Justice Secretary Anthony Schembri - the former head of New York City's jails who was the model for the

1991-1995 offbeat television show "The

Rock's tins for young blacks include driv ing with a white friend, and turning down loud rap music when pulled over. The video also shows scenes where actors dressed as police pretend to beat up blacks who didn't follow Rock's advice — a driver who jumps out of his car during a traffic stop and starts yelling profanities, and a man who jumps a subway turnstile while smoking marijuana and carrying a gun.

"I found this as being totally and abso lutely racist, there's no way around it.' said Democratic state Sen. Mandy Dawson, who was joined by five other black lawmakers. "It doesn't make sense to me to show this type of video under any circumstances to the NAACP.

Schembri's spokesman, Tom Denham, said the video was part of a discussion on racial profiling. He said Schembri, who is white, previously used it when teaching college courses as a way to open up discussion on profiling.

"The secretary is a very colorful and unusual man and he likes to push the envelope and get people to think about things," Denham said, adding the video was never meant to be used to train staff and administrators, as the lawmakers alleged.

"I would like to apologize. I did not mean to offend anyone," Schembri said through a spokesman. William H. Booth, a retired New York City judge and an NAACP member, said he was at the meeting and no one complained about the video. He said Schembri used it as an example of how the media can contribute to attitudes about profiling.

"I've never known him to be prejudiced in any way," said Booth, who knew Schem-bri in New York. "I don't think he's got a racial bone in his body

City of Berkeley sues school over campus expansion plan

By MICHELLE LOCKE

The Associated Press

BERKELEY, Calif. - The University of California, Berkeley, a hotbed of student protests during the Vietnam War, finds itself back in an uncomfortable spotlight with a city lawsuit over its long-range

City leaders have taken their university to court in hopes of blocking construction on its 15-year growth plan, arguing that campus administrators didn't adequately evaluate the consequences to the city

The flap is the latest in a series of town-gown spats across the country as modern-day budget constraints intensify age-old friction between schools and their surrounding communities

A number of other University of California campuses are embroiled in disagreements with their cit-ies, including Santa Cruz, where officials are wary of that campus' expansion plan.

One twist in the Berkeley vs. Berkeley face-off is that it is being led by Mayor Tom Bates, a graduate of the same campus he is now suing and a starting member of the 1959 Rose Bowl team

"As a proud alumnus of the University of California, I'm disappointed that we're here today to file the lawsuit, but we want a fair and lasting partner ship with the university," Bates said.

The suit, filed Wednesday, alleges that a campus environmental impact report, approved last month by the university's governing board of regents, doesn't adequately evaluate the consequences of adding up to 2.2 million square feet of space and about 2,000 parking spaces.

"The university has, in essence, asked us to sign the equivalent of a blank check that will allow them to build wherever, whenever and however it would like," Bates said. "This lawsuit firmly states that we are not willing to sign anything until we know what we're buying

Bates also announced that the city plans to start billing UC Berkeley for sewage service and parking taxes and is prepared to sue if the campus balks at

Campus officials counter that they are tax-exempt as a public agency. They defended their environmental report as meeting all legal requirements.

Berkeley administrators said they sympathize with the city's tight financial situation but, "it is in no one's interest for one public agency to sue another to address a budget shortfall.

While town-gown tensions often have flared over alcohol abuse and noise, the recent focus has been on money, said Sheldon Steinbach, general counsel for the American Council on Education in Washing-

"Over the last almost 40 years the principal point of friction has been over monetary issues as locali ties and states have become increasingly strapped for funds," he said.

snowy Monday night recently, Northern Arizona University freshman Natalie Eickmeyer finished her studying and decided to go out and have some fun. So at 10 o'clock, after scouring a dormitory for participants, she and five friends headed to the Wal-Mart discount center

The students had no intention of shopping. They were going to Wal-Mart to play games. That night, she and her pal

"It's big, it's the only thing open after 9 p.m., and you can get away with more," said Eickmeyer, ex-plaining why she and her friends regularly use Wal-Mart for various challenges

From scavenger hunts and aisle football to a relay race limbo under the shopping-cart stand, college students around the country - particularly in rural areas — have found Wal-Mart's endless aisles and 24-hour operations to be perfect for middle-of-the-night

Students at Taylor University in Upland, Ind., a liberal-arts school surrounded by cornfields, sign a contract promising not to drink, take drugs or have premari-tal sex. A dormitory there organizes wholesome activities, including group dates that begin at a res-taurant and end at a Wal-Mart for a scavenger hunt, says Elizabeth Diffin, a senior at the university. They typically play a version called "A-Z," where the team that first finds an item for every letter of the alphabet wins.

Sex educator to advance family life program

BY RUTH PADAWER

The (Hackensack, N.J.) Record

HACKENSACK N.I - When New Jer sey became the sex-ed capital of the world, Danene Sorace had only a rough idea of where babies came from

After all, she was 10. Today, Sorace, 32, knows all the details and is determined to pass them on. She has been tapped to lead the Network for Family Life Education, the group responsible for the state's nationally recognized - and aggressively frank -K-12 family life curriculum. In that post. she will be the pipeline to the nation's 30 million teens.

It won't be easy. The handoff comes at a time when the nation is embroiled in a passionate debate about how to address teen sexual behavior. Opponents of comprehensive sex education have gained significant ground, with an ally in the White House and millions of dollars to back their cause. At the same time, teens continue to be ill in formed.

"These kids are bombarded by the media with sexual images and innuendo and they take on a persona of sophistication, but there is a total disconnect between what they think they know and what they actually know," says Sorace. Ignorance aside, 30 percent of the nation's 15-year-olds are having sex, according to the most recent national survey.

Nearly one-quarter of suburban teens ages 13 to 16 have been sexually intimate. compared with 33 percent of urban teens. Overall, 12 percent of kids that age have had oral sex.

The Network for Family Life Education, formed by a Rutgers University professor more than two decades ago, pressed Trenton to mandate state-sponsored sex ed, arguing that the more informed students were, the more ably they would avoid pregnancy and disease. Opponents were anpalled, suing the state Board of Education all the way up to the U.S. Supreme Court and contending that explicit sex education would encourage promiscuity and usurp the role of parents.

When that effort failed New Jersey hecame the first state in the country to require sex ed in every grade of school.

Though the network's initial focus was on training health teachers and helping local districts implement the state curricu lum, more than three-quarters of the group's $1.3 million budget now goes to reaching teens directly. It publishes a newsletter for teens by teens that reaches 2.4 million adolescents in 50 states through schools, local health departments and juve nile justice centers.

It also runs a Web site called "Sex. Etc." that reaches 12 million teens a year. More than 40,000 visit daily, trolling through columns on relationships, health, body image, sexual orientation, drug abuse and prevent-ing pregnancy and disease. Teens also fire deeply personal questions at the site's online health experts, who provide candid, timely answers.

Sorace didn't grow up thinking she would spend her professional life talking about sey Raised in rural Pennsylvania she wanted to be an interior designer, even making her own business cards at age 11 and calling her company Rainbow Interiors

But after graduating from Albright College with a bachelor's in psychobiology, she was hired to lead teen health initiatives at a family planning consortium in Pennsyl. vania and direct the state Coalition to Prevent Teen Pregnancy. Only 22 years old she was the youngest in an office of 35.

In 1998, Sorace joined the Network for Family Life Education. By 2000, she had become its program manager, supervising its staff, managing its budget and leading its ever more challenging fund-raising operations. (Rutgers provides only office space, not money.) During that time, she earlier negative findings, but the results with incontinence were disappointing, too, said lead author Dr. Susan Hendrix, a gynecologist at Wayne State University

Another cause of urinary incontinence

The findings, published in Wednesday's Journal of the American Medical Association, come from research on 27,347 women, ages 50 to 79, participating in the Women's Health Initiative study

Compared with women taking dummy pills, those on estrogen pills for one year were 53 percent more likely to develop urinary in continence by year's end. Those on nills containing both estrogen and progestin faced a 39 percent higher risk.

The highest risks were for stress incontinence - urine leakage prompted by pressure on the lower abdomen from sneezing, laughing, coughing or walking. It can result from weak pelvic muscles. Women taking estrogen pills faced more than double the risk of developing stress incontinence, and risks were almost as high for women on pills containing both hormones.

Also, women who already had any incontinence faced increased risks of it worsening after a year - a nearly 60 percent higher risk for those on estrogen-only pills and a 20 percent higher risk for those on combined pills, compared with the placebo group.

Electronic knees may improve replacements BY LEE BOWMAN Enter the e-knee, which con-

Scripps Howard News Service

WASHINGTON - Just how many times does your knee flex and what kind of load does it bear when you climb a flight of stairs, ride a bike or shift gears while driving? It might be hard to keep track, but researchers working to-ward more durable artificial joints are finding out the details thanks to electronic knees

Researchers from the Scripps Clinic in La Jolla, Calif., presented data collected from an e-knee implanted in a patient who had al ready had a hip replacement and total knee replacement in his other knee, but continues a physically active lifestyle.

Their presentation before the annual meeting of the American Academy of Orthopaedic Surgeons on Wednesday is one of several dealing with the need to provide more sophisticated and durable artificial joints.

Each year, 267,000 total knee replacement surgeries are done in the United States, with increasing proportions of surgeries done in patients in their 40s and 50s who have been leading an active lifestyle and expect to continue doing so

Arthritis is the leading cause of degeneration in the knee joint requiring the surgery, but arthritis itself can be a matter of aging or response to severe injury of the knee in the past.

There is increasing concern that many knee implant recipi ents may outlive their plastic and metal artificial joints, forcing them to undergo repeat surgery The surgery is seldom as success ful the second time around and rehabilitation takes longer in older tains sensors that measure the strain across the knee that changes within the device as the natient moves

An antenna transmits electronic signals from the device into a computer system that measures the actual loads in pounds.

"Up until now, we relied on mathematical modeling to estimate forces distributed within the knee joint," said Dr. Clifford Caldwell, director of the Shiley Center for Orthopaedic Research and Education at the Scripps Clinic. "Now we have hard data that measures exactly how much force is placed on the joint when a patient performs various move ments, such as walking, bicycling or swinging a golf club

In recent months, the study has shown that total forces measured in the natient's knee are about 2.2 times body weight while walking and 2.5 times body weight when climbing stairs. Rising from a chair produced peak forces 1.5 times hady weight Those measurements are significantly lower than the loads predicted by computer modeling, which showed that climbing stairs produced a force 5.4 times body weight and walking 3.1 times body weight.

That's important because materials can be designed less dense but more durable if they don't have to support such extreme loads, the researchers said.

"These specific measurements may not only result in better implant design, but could also enable us to measure the effectiveness of postoperative physical therapy, overall rehabilitation, bracing and use of corrective orthotics," Caldwell said.

Data: High levels of perchlorate in breast milk

San Francisco Chronicle

A team of Texas Tech University researchers has found a contaminant from rocket fuel in women's breast milk at five times the average level found in dairy milk.

This first study in breast milk of perchlorate, a chemical that interferes with the thyroid, indicates that the majority of breast-feeding infants would be exceeding the safe daily dose set by the Na tional Academy of Sciences.

The peer-reviewed data published Tuesday in the journal Environmental Science & Technology reported perchlorate in 36 milk samples from women in 18 states and in all but one of 47 cow milk samples from 11 states. The average level in breast milk was 10.5 parts per billion, with a high of 92 ppb, while the average in cow's milk was 2 ppb with a high

New Academy members deal with first-time voting jitters

BY BETH HARRIS The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES eith David popped in a DVD of "Vera Drake" and settled into the comfort of his pil-low-strewn brown sofa. The veteran actor had decisions to make - lots of them — that would affect careers and coffers alike

David is a new member of one of the world's most exclusive voting blocs, the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences He's deciding for the very first time who gets to go home with an Oscar on Sunday.

"My vote counts," he said. "It's like I'm the Electoral Col-

David, animator Brad Bird, actress Scarlett Johansson and costume designer David C. Robinson were among 127 people invit-ed to join the 5,808-member academy last year.

"It's really nice to be able to feel like you have some part of who is recognized," said Johansson, 20, one of the voungest vot-"Maybe I should've done a bet with somebody to see if my picks win. Watching 35 movies — plus 10 short subjects and 10 documentaries - and listening to five CDs of nominated songs in barely three weeks would be nirvana to most film fans.

But it's been a race to the deadline - a very firm deadline that passed at 5 p.m. Tuesday - for many academy members, most of whom have jobs and families to attend to each day. David, for instance, had to cram two or three movies in after midnight one recent evening.

Bird's also felt the squeeze

"I feel a real rush, almost a panic, to see them all," he says, "so I'm voting from a place of knowledge and not just because I know someone on a film or I like someone on a film.'

Sometimes, the movies meld into a confusing blur.

Bird, nominated this year for original screenplay and animated feature for "The Incredi-bles," recently attended the academy's nominees luncheon and met best-actress contender Annette Bening. He told her he loved her in "Finding Julia.

Oops! Bird had confused "Being Julia" with best-picture nominee "Finding Neverland."

"I immediately corrected myself." he said. "T've seen so many in so little time."

Bird took his screeners - the free tapes and DVDs of the nominees - with him everywhere and watched at least one a day. During idle moments, he even resorted to seeing some on his computer. Animated feature and original screenplay were Bird's easiest votes - for himself.

At his home in Los Angeles, first-time Oscar voter Keith David watches actress Imelda Staunton's performance in "Vera Drake," which earned her an Academy Award nomination for best actress. He was racing to view all the films nominated before the ballot deadline Tuesday.

"I feel like I did a good job," he said modestly

Robinson, the New York-ased costume designer, based watched three movies a day. If he wasn't voting, he acknowledged he probably would have skipped "Lemony Snicket's A Series of Unfortunate Events' and "Hotel Rwanda."

"It's not brain surgery," he said. "It's the performances and movies visual things that grab you and make you feel something. I'm going to pick the things that do that," he said in a phone

State" and "Barbershop." "It's my opinion," he said. "Even if I don't know enough about it, when I look at the movie, I look at that aspect. I know how a good editor can save ... a bad director.

After watching "Vera Drake on his 36-inch television, David scribbled down notes detailing what he liked about the illegal abortion drama starring best-actress nominee Imelda Staunton

"Torn doesn't begin to describe it," he said. "A lot of them get the same mark, so I go back and narrow it down. The few movies that I'm very hot on, I go back and watch them again. It's hard to compare actors unless you saw them all play the same

Bird will be in the Kodak Theatre audience on Oscar night and Johansson will be a presenter. David and Robinson, meanwhile, will have to watch the fruits of their labors on TV because there's not enough room at the Kodak for every academy

But that hasn't dimmed Dayid's regard for Hollywood's highest honor.

"I'm very glad they changed the language to 'The Oscar goes to,' instead of 'The winner is,' David said. "There are no losers

Prince gets NAACP kudos

Prince may be a man of many names, but the NAACP likes his image regardless.

The "Purple Rain" singer will be honored with the 2005 NAACP Vanguard Award in a Los Angeles ceremony. The presentation will take place during the 36th annual NAACP Image Awards ceremony on March 19, which will be broadcast March 25 on Fox television

"During Prince '80s, emerged as the musical prophet of the era, releasing a series of albums that both define and captured the spirit of the times," the National Associa-tion for the Advancement of Colored People said in a statement. "His genre-bending songs sent shock waves through the music industry that still reverberate today."

The award is given to those who have worked to increase understanding and awareness of racial and social issues. The previous honorees are film director Steven Spielberg and movie producer Stanley Kramer. Earlier this month, Prince won two Grammy Awards - for best male R&B vocal performance for "Call My Name," a single from his most recent album, "Musicology," and best traditional R&B vocal performance for "Musicology."

First 'Idol' to tour solo

Kelly Clarkson is hitting the road on her first solo headline tour.

Clarkson, winner of the first "American Idol" competition, will open "The Breakaway Tour" March 30 in Tulsa. Okla. The tour will end in Vancouver. British Columbia May 29.

Director Tsai Ming-liang says he won't release his award-winning film "The Wayward Cloud" in his native Taiwan if the island's censors insist on cutting any of its sexually explicit scenes.

The film won a Silver Bear from the Berlin International Film Festival Saturday for outstanding artistic contribution. The movie stars Lee Kang-sheng, who plays a porn film actor caught between his longtime on-screen partner and his girlfriend.

The movie includes oral sex, nudity and other sexually explicit scenes.

Bank fees add up, but some can be avoided

No matter where you bank these days, there are service fees and they can easily add up

"We have to have fees," said Gail Enda, senior vice president of marketing and member services at American Airlines Federal Credit Union. "It costs money to run a financial institution." But that doesn't mean you have to be the one to pay the fees. Simply put, poorer customers cost banks money. If a customer

It's very difficult to find an account that is completely fee-free. Banks and credit unions offer no-frills, no-interest checking accounts, but there always seems to be some sort of catch. "Everyone advertises free checking, but there's not a fee unless you do something wrong. said John Sutton, vice president of branch operations for Credit Union of Texas, "Plus, if you want checks for your checking account, you are going to have to pay for them.

Also, having just one account doesn't necessarily give you privileges of other bank services. An

Why the charge: The account may be free to the customer, but the bank still has to pay transaction costs.

The cost: Free, if you keep your account in good standing. If you want to write checks, you are going to have to buy them.

How to avoid them: There are many companies out there that provide and print checks for less than what you pay if you ordered them through your bank. Or you can try to only use debit cards and online bill paying.

If you need cash and use another bank's ATM, you are going to be assessed an out-of-network

In 2002, 69 percent of the nation's banks charged fees for nonbank customer withdrawals, according to the Federal Reserve About 10 percent of banks and savings associations charged an annual fee, which averaged nearly $12 for ATM services.

"If you're going out on a Friday night, you have to make sure you don't use the ATM at the bar, because it's going to cost you some-thing like $6." said Jim Tehan of Myvesta, a consumer education group.

"Those that want convenience will pay for it."

How to avoid them: Use your own bank's ATMs or those owned by institutions that do not charge fees to noncustomers. And if you frequently use another bank's ATM, consider making larger withdrawals so that you incur fewer ATM access fees

If an account balance has slipped below the minimum your bank requires, you may incur a single monthly fee.

If you have money in multiple accounts or do some other business with them, such as an auto or home loan, ask whether the balances can be combined to meet the minimum requirements.

Best time to use gift cards

NEW YORK - Americans spent an estimated $20 billion on gift cards during the 2004 holiday season, reports the International Council of Shopping Cen-

Most people begin redeeming their gift cards soon after the holidays, but many wait until that ideal purchase comes along. If you've still got holiday gift cards, now's the time to use them - before the assorted hidden fees kick in

Did you know that a $50 gift card might no longer be at full value, even though you haven't spent a dime? Here are some of the little-known, yet common gift-card pitfalls:

■ Balance/maintenance fees. A small percentage of your remaining balance will be deducted every month after the card isn't used within a set period of

as short as a year. ■ Dormancy fees. These kick in if the card isn't used within a set period of time - usually between six months and a year. The fee can be as high a $2 per month Limits on cash back. If you redeem your gift certificate for merchandise valued at less than the gift certificate's value, vou may get cash back for the remainder. Other gift cards don't offer cash back, even if the remainder is a few pennies.

If you're not sure what restrictions are on your gift card, there are two ways to check. Many gift cards include rules and restrictions in fine print either on the card or its packaging. Or you might call or visit the store and ask a company representative for the details.

U.S. Extended Forecast A weak low pressure center will bring a bit of snow to New York and New England on Saturday. At the same time, flurries will occur downwind of the Great Lakes. The rest of the Northeast will enjoy a dry day under some sun. The dry weather will stretch into the Southeast; however, a frontal boundary will trigger showers in parts of Florida. A developing storm system will bring some rain to western and southern portions of Texas; plenty of sun will shine over the rest of the Plains. Spotty rain and mountain snow showers will once again occur over New Mexico and Arizona and extend into western Colorado. The West Coast will remain dry, but rain may plague Southern California on Monday.

Man gunned down

CA SACRAMENTO — A 23-year-old man was gunned down in broad day-light while sitting in his car at a busy intersection Sunday in what a sheriff's spokesman called an "execution"

Sacramento County sheriff's investigators are looking for possible links to several recent gang-related shootings, Sgt. R.L. Davis said.

Authorities said two men got out of a silver 1997 Toyota Camry, went around a bus filled with 16
children from a church and fired up to 18 rounds into Pra Vang's car.

Witnesses told authorities the assailants, described as Asian men wearing red and black clothing, fled in the Toyota, which was carrying two other passengers.

Vang died at the scene, Davis said. No one else was injured, and no other vehicle was hit, Davis said.

Coffee Pot dilemma

PA BEDFORD — The owners of a coffeepot-shaped luncheonette are hoping someone perks up and figures out a new use for the historic structure.

About a 18 months ago, a former owner donated the 1927-era Koontz Coffee Pot to the Bedford County Fair Board. The board moved the notable building to the front entrance of its fairgrounds and spent thousands of dollars to reprovate it.

But now, the board isn't sure what to do with it.

"We're just letting it be known that if people have suggestions, we're open to them," said board president John Holbert.

Until 2003, the Coffee Pot sat on U.S. Route 30 — one of America's first highways, also known as the Lincoln Highway, Bert Koontz, a local businessman, built the structure as a novelty luncheonette designed to draw customers to the service station next door.

Some have suggested using it for a hot dog stand, a retail shop or an art gallery.

Olga Herbert, the director of the

Olga Herbert, the director of the Lincoln Highway Heritage Corridor, thinks the Coffee Pot would be a great place to sell coffee cups

Fleet converting fuel

TM CHATTANOOGA—All diecity-owned fleet will begin using biodiesel next week in an effort to improve air quality. Regular diesel fuel is mixed with animal fats and vegetable oils to produce biodiesel. State officials already agreed to reduce interstate highway speed limits in Hamilton County to lessen pollutants from diesel engines.

Pella opening new plant

MACOMB—Pella Corp., an inowa-based window and door maker, said it will build a manufacturing plant in Macomb, creating 480 jobs. Up to $7 million in state grants and tax incentives will help launch the 275,000-square-foot factory that's scheduled to open in March 2006. Pella will produce a new line of historic-looking windows at the plant.

Student guilty of murder

TX EDINBURG — A 17-year-old has pleaded guilty to stabbing to death a fellow student as they waited for their parents to pick them up from an after-hours school event last March.

Jason C. Gonzalez pleaded guilty Tuesday to stabbing 15-year-old Lianna Nicole Olmeda 15 times outside Pharr-San Juan-Alamo North High School after a drama competition on March 29, 2004.

Gonzalez was to stand trial for Olmeda's death, but because of his guilty plea, a jury will determine Gonzalez's punishment. The jury will hear testimony from police officers, teachers, witnesses and family members.

Gonzalez is being tried as a minor because he was 16 at the time of the murder.

Prosecuting Assistant District Attorney Juan Villescas asked jurors to give Gonzalez the maximum of 40 years in prison.

Defense attorney Eddy Trevino told jurors Gonzalez suffered mental problems since age 12, including attention deficit hyperactive disorder and depression. After the slaying, Gonzalez was diagnosed with Aspergers syndrome, a high-functioning form of autism.

Shellfish harvest ban on

VA GLOUCESTER — A state ban on shellfish harvesting from six tributaries of the Severn River was set to begin Tuesday, following the discovery of high levels of bacteria from human or animal month for Whitaker,

their tributaries on the Severn's northwest branch. On the Severn's
southwest branch, Willetts Creek, Rowes Creek, Holly Bush Creek and their tributaries were also made off-limits to shellfish harvesting.

Recent water samples from those tributaries showed excessive levels of fecal coliform, and eating shellfish from the waterways could lead to illness, state officials said.

Commercial fishermen don't work on those tributaries. But Tim Fearington, field director of the Virginia Division of Shellfish Sanitation's Norfolk office, said homeowners on the affected waterways had been advised not to harvest and eat shellfish.

Some people might have piers or docks in the creeks and use traps to grow oysters, he said.

The condemnations follow a Division of Shellfish Sanitation survey of 906 properties in the Severn watershed from February 2004 to April 2005 that identified 82 potential sources of pollutants.

The sources include livestock with direct access to creeks and ditches, homeowners with septic systems leaking effluent and washing machines that drain directly onto the ground or into ditches.

Bill would ban trap

RI PROVIDENCE — Legislation has been introduced that would ban a type of animal trap in Rhode Island.

Currently, the leghold, steel-jawed trap can be used in the state, with a permit from the state Department of Environmental Management. The animal rights group Defenders of Animals wants to ban the traps, saying they main pets and other animals, and could be daneerous to small children.

Similar traps have been banned in 90 countries, according to the group.

The bill was introduced by Rep. Joseph Trillo, of Warwick, on Defenders of Animals' behalf.

No BO in the library!

CAN SANTA BARBARA County officials say people with body odor aren't welcome as library users. That means people who smell bad, including many homeless, can be denied service. Library Director Brian Reynolds said librarians will use their discretions.

Bill benefits vets

CHEYENNE — Gov. Dave Freudenthal signed a bill that will make it easier for veterans to obtain an $800 break on their property taxes. The previous law contained a list of wars and had to be updated after each conflict involving the U.S. military. The new law streamlines the process so that veterans are automatically eligible.

Officials using blogs

MINNEAPOLIS — Some elected and appointed officials are using Web logs to keep their constituents in the loop. The bloggers' topics range from redevelopment efforts to where a city manager was going on a winter getaway. Scott Neal, Eden Prairie city manager, says it's a way to reduce the disconnect between local government and its citizens.

long-delayed black history museum could get a much-needed boost this week if the City Council approves spending $250,000 to launch a national fund-raising campaign. Court cashes in PA PHILADELPHIA — A 3-year-old program that allows police to impound the cars of traffic scofflaws has helped turn a once financially strapped court into a cash cow.

President Judge Francis E. Kelly of the Philadelphia Traffic Court said not enough money was coming in to cover the court's expenses in 1990, with $56 million owed and more than 174,000 arrest warrants unserved.

Last year, the court collected $23.1 million, nearly five times its $4.8 million budget. Court officials expect to collect even more money this year

Law enforcement efforts were beefed up, but authorities credit 2002's Live Stop program for much of the turnaround. Under the program, police are allowed to seize cars stopped for traffic violations if the vehicle is unregistered or uninsured, or if the driver is not properly licensed.

The program has resulted in the impounding of 75,000 vehicles. Last year, 27,000 vehicles were seized and nearly 15,000 released after the owners settled their outstanding tickets. About 45 percent of the fines collected at the court go to the city, 55 percent to the state.

Nickel bingo now OK

OR KLAMATH FALLS — The folks who play bingo at the Klamath Basin Senior Citizen Center are no longer outlaws.

Five months ago, the Department of Justice contacted officials at the senior center after getting a complaint that bingo games were being played for cash

Nickels, to be exact,

The senior center has a gambling license for the higher-stakes bingo program. But the Golden Age Club, which has about 200 members, is separate from the senior center and has never had a gaming license for its nickel-hingo operation. The Klamath County Board of Commissioners last week amended the county's social gaming ordinance to include bingo, to the relief of the seniors who learned they've been playing an illegal game for the last two decades.

"Have fun with your bingo without the bureaucracy," Commission-er Bill Brown told an audience of about 20 seniors who came to support changing the rule.

Students clean up

ANN ARBOR - Some University of Michigan students are cleaning up - in more ways than one.

They're getting cash payments for keeping their dormitory rooms presentable and available for tours by prospective students and their parents

Eighteen students in nine residence halls are participating in the Michigan Campus Day tour program, according to Randi Johnson, the university's housing outreach coordinator.

The rules for Campus Day participants technically don't require a clean room. Participants do, however, have to be dressed and out of bed if they are home, and must let tour groups see their room from 11 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. on Mondays, Thursdays and Fridays.

Displays of anything illegal, offensive or banned — like hot plates are forbidden.

Sophomores Aaron Bennick and Eric Romain are receiving $100 each this semester to participate.

Their room impressed Clark Iverson, 44, of Royal Oak, who was on the Friday tour with his 18-year-old son, Geoffrey, a high school senior who has been admitted to Michigan

"It's cleaner than a 15-year-old's room," Clark Iverson said

Banks hit by forgers

NC HIGH POINT — A group of forgers who bilked two High Point banks out of nearly $125,000 on one day last month is suspected in similar schemes that area banks more than $250,000 since December, Police say surveillance footage showed as many as 40 to 50 people cashed counterfeit payroll checks doctored to resemble those from a local business. The scenario has been reported in recent months at three banks in Thomasville and Davidson County.

Developer settles debts

PROVIDENCE - The developer who wants to buy the Westin Hotel in Providence will pay $6.5 million to the state to settle debts left from the 1990s banking crisis. The deal with James Procaccianti was approved by a state committee. Both sides said the settlement is unrelated to the Procaccianti Group's $95.5 million high bid for the Westin.

County goes after city

DETROIT - Wayne County officials want Hamtramck to refund nearly $4 million in overpayments, a burden the struggling city says it can't afford. The county says it overpaid Hamtramck for 15 years as part of an agreement that compensates the city for revenue lost in connection with the county jail. The error was discovered after the county's longtime accounting director retired

Trust land package sinks PHOENIX — Efforts to hammer out a package of state trust land changes to benefit education funding, preservation of open space and planned development have foundered at the Legislature, officials said. Arizona has 9.3 million acres of trust land, awarded by the federal government at statehood. It must be used to benefit public schools and institutions.

Vehicle article misleading

As I read the Feb. 15 article "Protecting U.S. troops, convoys with armor," I was surprised at how skewed the perception of vehicle armoring is.

The article claims that only 1 out of 4 ehicles has "hillbilly armor." I suppose vehicles has "hillbilly armor. this is possible if you count Abrams and Bradleys, but that is deceiving. The ques tion is: Of the vehicles that were originally unarmored, how many now have factory-manufactured armor kits and how many are "hillbilly" style?

As a convoy commander in the Sunni Triangle for a year now, I saw that maybe 1 out of 4 vehicles had factory-manufactured add-on armor, leaving three-quarters with "hillbilly armor." Of my transportation company's 75 vehicles, only our 11 Humvees had factory kits; that is 85 percent "hillbilly.

Don't get me wrong, that's better than when we got here, but a long way from where the article claims.

The article also discusses how armor is removed in Kuwait to be reused. In our outprocessing, only our door panels were salvageable, the rest was scrap. Why not leave the trucks here? We just got them right, after a year of trying.

The underlying issue is this: Army leadership has failed to learn. Since World War II, right through Vietnam, soldiers have used "hillbilly armor." There are even Army field manuals that address how to do it

Yet, for all of this, we never realize that there is a requirement for some level of protection on all pieces of military equip-

It isn't too hard to imagine that if you go to war in a vehicle, someone might try to blow it up or shoot you.

Yes, we are buying armor kits now, but every vehicle needs to be designed with this in mind. Will this generation of Army leadership really learn from this experience and change things?

Short-sighted on SGLI?

After reading the "short comment" about the raise in the servicemembers' death gratuity and insurance payment plans ("Finan-cial responsibility first," letter, Feb. 15), I wonder how many operate under the same misconceptions.

Before woe is cried on the government's behalf, note that Servicemembers' Group Life Insurance is a group life insurance plan. While all pay into it, only some are paid. There is a substantial amount of money making ever more money for the insurance company that beneficiaries will never see. Note also that raising the servicemember's benefit will not come without raising the servicemember's premium.

The benefit, the letter writer concedes with some chagrin, will not originate with the government. It will come from the pockets of every paying servicemember, just as it does now

On the heels of an otherwise-friendly reminder to educate one's spouse of the death benefit came a not-so-friendly assumption that there are those for whom the death benefit outweighs the death, and a misguided belief about where that benefit comes from in the first place. Pity, the comment wasn't as short as the sight.

Remembering the 'Alamo'

With day and night mortar incoming attacks and a lot of action, the "Alamo" has been home for American soldiers assigned to train and advise the 303rd Iraqi National Guard.

The Alamo is a small compound inside Forward Operating Base Hawk, northwest of Baghdad

When Capt, Joseph Pace and the first noncommissioned officers and soldiers of Headquarters and Headquarters Company 2-12 Cavalry — a total of 10 — arrived at this installation, there were no windows, doors, electricity, showers, protection fence, dining facility, furniture and other commodities

It was more than one year ago and I was part of it. We helped to install, repair and fix. We had the strong determination from the first day to defeat the enemy, defend and always protect the Alamo.

Without a post exchange, Internet cafe, gyms and entertainment, the Alamo was witness to the release of hundreds of prisoners of Abu Ghraib prison. We also saw recruitments of new police and Iraqi soldiers, international journalists, interpreters, rocket attacks, assistance to casualties, and the important development of Iraqi soldiers who learned and accomplished many missions.

To make proficient Iraqi soldiers who were not well-equipped, who had language barriers and who did not have an idea of what the chain of command or Uniform Code of Military Justice were, did not take a week. Did we get awards or rewards for the accomplished job? None. Safety and accomplished job? progress were more important.

We are now miles away from the Alamo. Besides leaving it in secure hands, we know that we did a very important mission and contributed to the reconstruction of Iraq. Staff Sgt. Walter Challapa

Dear Abby

Find a good man where good men go

Dear Abby: I am a

27-year-old woman who would like to meet and date a man who respects women

Two years ago, my husband and I were divorced. Since then my dating experiences have been disappointing.

My friends and acquaintances all say that meeting men in a bar is not a good way to find someone with whom I could be happy. I agree, because most of the men I have met in bars never call after the first date. They are unemployed, recently separated, or drop me after a few dates when I won't have sex I have contacted local parishes to find out about weekend retreats and charity functions, but dating men I met there didn't bring any better results. I don't understand why dating is such a problem. I'm blonde, attractive and friendly. I work and attend college full time. I am ambitious, a voracious reader and can carry on an intelligent conversation

Most men I've encountered seem happy to live at home with their parents and don't want to start a family of their

> I'm looking for someone who would take me to dinner and a movie and treat me like a lady. I don't mind staying home and watching movies sometimes but men today apparently want only casual sex - not relationships. Unlike my girlfriends who are satisfied with bar-hopping every weekend for male company ionship. I want to share my life with someone and have a family. I'm not asking for an instant marriage proposal, but I would like a meaningful relationship. Have you any suggestions?

Dear Discouraged: At the risk of sounding like a broken record. decent people can be found where decent people gather. Volunteer vour services at a library, a hospital, the mental health society, or anyplace that could use a helping hand. Join clubs focused on activities you enjoy such as hiking, reading, golfing, fishing, etc. Take square dance, ballroom, folk or line dance classes. Go to museums art exhibits and concerts. Join the chamber of commerce and attend its mixers; join a professional club, a gym or the YMCA Volunteer at a political campaign headquarters. The more ople who know you're interest ed in meeting someone, the greater your chances will be of finding Mr. Right.

Online proposal not a fairy tale

Dear Annie: I've been Annie's Mailbox dating "Tommy" for a little over a year, and he's just popped "The Ques-I've known for months that he was going to propose, because he began talking about kids and our own place and our future. I am in love with this man, and I want to say yes, but here's the problem: We communicate a lot via MSN Messenger, and that's how he asked me. The technological age takes all the romance out of love. I imagined a dozen other pro posal scenarios, none of which involved the Internet. Each one included Tommy down on one knee with a ring. Now I'm not sure how to respond. I told two of my friends about the proposal. One wanted to tell him off; the other said I'm making too much of it and should respond the way my heart feels.

I don't need some elaborate scheme. I just want a sweet, down-on-one-knee-with-a-ring proposal.

idea what you want. We think Tommy proposed in this fash ion because he wasn't sure he could work up the courage to do it in person. Reply, saving you will give him your answer when you can gaze romantically into his eyes. If you really need him to appear with a ring, you can add, "I can't wait to see the ring," although we're pretty certain he doesn't have one yet. We say, if you want to marry the guy, you should accept the proposal, regardless of how it's made. The rest is just window-dressing. Dear Annie: I read the letter from "Afraid in Florida" the mom who worried about her 15-year-old son, "Mark," who

I'm a voung woman who con stantly receives cat-calls of "Hey, it's not Halloween!" and 'Where's the funeral?" I commend Mark for having the courage to dress how he chooses Even more. I applaud his mother for accepting his choices However, she shouldn't worry so much about her son being beaten up or not getting a job From personal experience, I can tell her he probably receives little more than ridiculous comments from people too shallow to focus on the great person he is, and who see only his outward appearance. Since he's lucky enough to have good family support, those little barbs will do nothing but make him stronger.

Slugger reports to camp; Red Sox put final touches on ring ceremony

Sammy Sosa introduced himself to his new Raltimore team. mates the best way he knew: with a power display.

baseballs over the center-field wall during his first workout with the Orioles in

Fort Lauderdale, Fla., on Wednesday Refore he was done nearly half the squad interrupted their drills to watch the show

"Sammy, we're going to run out of balls!" joked outfielder Larry Bigbie, who watched in awe as one shot after another soared onto an airfield behind the practice field.

The Chicago Cubs were relieved to get rid of Sosa after his troubled 2004 season, and the Orioles are delighted to have him.

During his stay in Chicago, Sosa battled with Mark McGwire in a memorable home run duel in 1998, went to the All-Star Game seven times and was the 1998 NL MVP. But he contends that the corked bat and his early departure from the ballpark ruined an otherwise wonderful relationship "For the 13 years I was in Chicago, I only made two mistakes. That's pretty good," he said. "If I had known that leaving early last year would have caused such a controversy, I would have never done it. My manager told me I had a day off. But what can I say? In Fort Myers, Fla., the Boston

Red Sox learned they will get their World Series rings at their home opener on April 11 before a sold-out Fenway Park crowd and the New York Yankees.

"I'm sure I'm not going to help them hand them out," Yankees shortstop Derek Jeter said to laughter at New York's camp in Tamna "But they deserve it. I'm sure they've been looking forward to this for a long time. So let them do

Boston became the first major league team to overcome a 3-0 deficit in the playoffs, doing it against their biggest rival in the AL championship series last October. The Red Sox then swept St. Louis in the World Series

"This is the kind of quality problem I hope we're going to be able to have with some frequency," Red Sox President Larry Lucchi no said, "sit around at spring training and decide just when, of when, do we give out the World Series championship rings.

To accommodate fans who didn't get tickets to Opening Day. the rings will be displayed at a welcome-home dinner attended by players that same night and at a display on the Fenway Park field along with the World Series trophy and the ball Doug Mientkiewicz caught for the last out of

In his first workout with the Orioles, Sammy Sosa hit two dozen balls far over the center-field wall in Fort Lauderdale. Fla., on Wednesday.

"Even though the fans are not getting it, they have to feel like they're receiving one because they all deserve it," David Ortiz said. "They supported us a lot through the years

In Lakeland, Fla., Ugueth Urbina said he planned to report to spring training, even if his kidnapped mother still was being

He didn't want to show her can tors that he was weak. Now that Maura Villarreal is safe following a rescue operation Friday, Urbina said an indescribable weight has been lifted from his shoulders

"I feel like I'm 18 years old," the Detroit Tigers reliever said. speaking publicly about the ordeal for the first time.

Villarreal, 54, was rescued by Venezuelan police during an eight-hour raid that left two of her abductors dead, two captured and seven others as fugitives. Police described the kidnappers as Venezuelan and Colombian drug smugglers She was held for 5 months, 18 days in a camp that police called a drug-traffickers' hideout in Venezuela's southern mountains

Urbina and his two brothers Ulmer and Ulises, were at a loss. "There wasn't much we could do. We'd never been in this situation, and we didn't know where she was," Urbina said. "Where can you go to try to find her? She could be anywhere. It's hard.

In Winter Haven, Fla., Cleve land's Juan Gonzalez became the latest player to deny Jose Canseco's accusation of using steroids.

"It's not true. ... I never saw needles. I never saw pills. I never saw anything. ... The only guys who have put needles in my body are doctors," Gonzalez said

In Kissimmee, Fla., Atlanta shortstop Rafael Furcal hustled off the field, ignoring several television crews that wanted to speak with him. At his locker a few minutes later, he responded tersely to an interview request: "Are you going to ask me about baseball?

He spent 13 days in jail during the offseason and four weeks in an alcohol treatment center following his second conviction for drunken driving. The 26-year-old Furcal gave up alcohol after his latest arrest, but also said he doesn't believe he has a drinking problem.

"Just bad luck." he said.

In Scottsdale, Ariz., manager Felipe Alou said he thinks he'll probably be back with the San Francisco Giants for a fourth season in 2006.

His contract ends after this season and Alou turns 70 in May, but he has shown he still has enough energy to lead the Giants for 162 games. He also wants to manage his son, Moises, for another sea-

Dodgers closer Gagne injures knee

BY JOHN NADEL The Associated Press

VERO BEACH, Fla. - Los Angeles Dodgers closer Eric Gagne sprained a ligament in his left knee Thursday during the team's first full-squad workout of spring training, and will undergo an MRI exam. Gagne didn't seem particularly concerned but trainer Stan Johnston said the 29-year-old right-hander probably will have his activity limited for about a week. Johnston said the injury needs about six weeks to fully

"Any time you hurt some-thing, it's usually going to take that long," Johnston said. "We want to do a precautionary MRI to see what the damage is. It was hard to examine him because he was apprehensive at times."

Johnston said Gagne heard a pop when he was injured while playing pepper.

"It could just be an old piece of scar tissue," Johnston said, adding he wouldn't be able to say when Gagne would be able to pitch in an exhibition game until after the MRI exam.

"I turned around and a cleat got stuck," Gagne said. "I just twisted my knee a little bit. I'm not concerned. There's no swelling, and that's a really good sign."

Congressman urges MLB to testify about steroid use

WASHINGTON — A senior

House Democrat urged Thursday that Jose Canseco and others the former slugger accused of abusing steroids, including Mark McGwire, be called before Congress to testify on use of performance-enhancing drugs. Rep. Henry Waxman of Califor-a, the top Democrat on the House Government Reform Committee, said representatives from Major League Baseball and the players' association should appear before the panel to explain how they plan to stop the use of drugs by baseball players.

Waxman made his request for hearings to the chairman of the committee, Rep. Tom Davis, R-Va. There was no immediate re sponse from Davis' office.

In Canseco's book, Wild Times, Rampant 'Roids, Smash Hits & How Baseball Got Big," he admits using steroids and alleges that McGwire often injected the drugs with him. He said he introduced steroids to former Teyas Rangers teammates Rafael Palmeiro, Juan Gonzalez and Ivan Rodriguez. All have publicly de nied Canseco's charges.

"Mr. Canseco insists his information is accurate," but Major League Baseball says it will not inSports legations, Waxman said. Hearwith Canseco, McGwire and others "would be an opportunity to find out what really happened and to get to the bottom of this growing

NASCAR penalizes R. Gordon

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. Robby Gordon Motorsports was fined $50,000 Wednesday and docked 25 championship points, the most severe penalty for violations at Daytona.

NASCAR fined crew chief Bob Temple and deducted points from car owner Jim Smith for an unapproved intake manifold on his Chevrolet on Feb. 11 during the initial Nextel Cup inspection for the season-opening Daytona 500.

Gordon, driver and part owner of the new team, failed to make the lineup for the Daytona 500 and has no points. Smith earned 31 based on qualifying results.

Sharapova advances in Qatar DOHA, Qatar — Wimbledon champion Maria Sharapova beat

Tony Stewart signs autographs for fans in the garage area of the Daytona International Speedway on Feb. 18. Stewart, who has won IRL and Nextel Cup series titles, might be content to walk away from racing if he could win the Indy and Daytona 500s,

BY JENNA FRYER The Associated Press

CHARLOTTE, N.C. ony Stewart is someday going to break through and win the big races that always seem to get away from him. He's had chances at his beloved Indianapolis Motor Speedway, and has had victory in sight at the Daytona 500, only to come up short at the very end

If Stewart ever scores those wins, he might just climb out of his car and call it a career.

"If I could get everything done I want to get done, I would probably be gone from here by now - I would have won everything I wanted to win," Stew-

When the day comes that Stewart quits full-time racing, he'll walk away with a résumé that will rank him among the most talented drivers ever

He has nine championships in various forms of racing, starting with a Karting title he won in 1980 at 8 years old. He was the first driver in history to win USAC's Triple Crown in 1995 and he won the IRL series title in 1997. He then became the first IRL driver to successfully transition into NASCAR, where he claimed the 2002 series championship.

Those championships have given Stewart a great-er respect for the crown jewels on every schedule. He understands what an Indianapolis 500 title means to a driver's résumé, and the same for a Daytona 500 victory A driver can win 100 championships, but will forever be recognized for the big wins

"I remember what it was like to win the IRL championship," Stewart said. "The next year, it was a weight lifted off my shoulders. I could concentrate on individual races. I didn't even look hardly at the

Perhaps that explains why Stewart hasn't really been a factor in the NASCAR's championship race since his 2002 title. He's already got that trophy, its the others he needs to complete his career

He came close again last weekend, leading a race-high 107 laps in

But with the finish line in sight, he again had the biggest win of his career snatched away when good buddy Dale Earnhardt Jr. pushed him out of the draft during a late-race pass for the lead and Stewart was shuffled back into traffic. He ended up a distant seventh, bitterly disappointed again after joining the late Dale Earnhardt in the record book for

Earnhardt was the last driver to dominate the race and not win, leading 107 laps in 1993 and failing to earn a trip to Victory Lane

Stewart led the most laps at Daytona last year, too. But in the end, Earnhardt Jr. had the better car and Stewart ended up pushing him to the win.
Stewart is 0-for-7 in the Daytona 500 and the first driver since Bobby Allison to lead the most laps in ecutive 500s since he did it in 1981 and 1982.

But Allison won in 1982 Stewart is still trying.

"We could write a book about it. How many years did Dale Earnhardt go through it?" crew chief Greg Zipadelli moaned. "Hopefully we don't have to wait that long (20 years) to win one of these things.

As long as the title eludes him, Stewart might stick around NASCAR.

He's made no secret of his desire to get out while he's still young — he's 33 now — and is already planning for his future. He owns teams in the World of Outlaws and USAC racing series and recently bought famed Eldora Speedway in Rossburg, Ohio

— the dirt track where he started his career. So now he spends his free time learning the ins and outs of running a race track.

For now, all he cares about is chasing those elusive victories — his next battle comes in August at Indy's Brickyard 400 because he says he's taking a break from the heartbreaking Indianapolis 500 right now - and building his portfolio.

"I might be one of those guys who wakes up one morning and say 'I've had enough' or decide to sign another five-year contract," he said. "You know me. It may depend on which way the wind's blowing right

Enigmatic Moss headed to Oakland

Vikings will reportedly get LB Harris, No. 7 pick and late-round selection

BY JON KRAWCZYNSKI The Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS - Randy Moss' electrifying talent was no longer enough for the Minnesota Vikings to put up with his distracting antics.

Dante DiTrapano, Moss' agent, told The Associated Press on Wednesday that the Vikings and the Oakland Raiders had "come to an agreement on Randy playing for Oakland next year.

Neither the Vikings nor the Raiders would confirm the deal, which was first reported by The St. Paul Pioneer Press.

"We have had discussions with the Oak land Raiders, but there's nothing to announce," Rob Brzezinski, Minnesota's vice president of football operations, told The Associated Press.

Raiders spokesman Mike Taylor said, "I cannot comment on the deal specifically. however, this organization has always been tremendously aggressive and Randy Moss rates with the great players of all-time. Great players want to play for the Raiders

DiTranano said he didn't know the terms of the deal, but the Pioneer Press reported the Vikings would get linebacker Napoleon Harris, along with the seventh overall pick and a late-round pick in the upcoming draft.

The deal cannot become official until March 2 the start of the NFL's fiscal year Moss is due to make $7.25 million next year. Harris is due to make $5.41 million. Oakland's renegade owner Al Davis has long embraced combustible players and the vertical passing game, so adding Moss seems to be a perfect fit.

The timing of the move comes as a bit of a surprise with the Vikings in the midst of an ownership change. Red McCombs has agreed to sell the team to Arizona businessman Reggie Fowler, a deal that still needs to be approved by the NFL.

Trade rumors have surrounded the flam

boyant Moss during the offseason

Team leaders Matt Birk and Daunte Culpepper confronted Moss after he walked off at Washington, and the organization's natience with the receiver seemed to dwindle in the past year or so.

"He's my good friend, but you almost get to thinking that maybe enough is enough," Culpepper said earlier this month at the Pro Bowl. "And maybe the Vikings organization has had enough."

Last year's transgressions were the latest in a long line of headline-grabbing negative behavior for Moss that included bumping a traffic control officer with his car in 2002, verbally abusing corporate sponsors on a team bus in 2001 and squirting an official with a water bottle in 1999. But when he was focused and healthy on the field, there was no denying his considerable ability.

His 9,142 receiving yards are the most by any player over his first seven seasons. The Vikings' offensive identity was built around Moss' uncanny ability to leap over smaller defensive backs to catch deep passes. Moss burst into the league in 1998 and has been a big reason why the Vikings have sold out every game, including preseason, since he arrived. "The Freak" caught 17 TD passes - many of them long, high-arching throws from Randall Cunningham - to help lead the Vikings to the

Weather adds to unpredictability of Match Play By Doug Ferguson The Associated Press

CARLSBAD Calif Match Play Championship features 64 of the best players in the world. The guy getting most of the attention at La Costa Resort is someone not even playing this Mark Russell is the PGA Tour tournament director who determines whether a golf course is suitable to play. His appearance in the press room Wednesday afternoon was his fourth in the past five days, more than Tiger Woods has made all year.

At least this time, Russell brought good news.

Despite ponds where there was fairway and water spilling over creeks, the Match Play Championship was set to start Thursday.

"I hope we can get out there and get these guys playing golf and you can stop talking to me and start talking to some of them " Russell said

The talk still figures to focus on wet conditions

La Costa will play longer than usual because the soggy condi-tions will negate any roll. David Toms played the front nine Tuesday before it rained, and Todd Hamilton played the back nine.

Tiger Woods' record is 20-3 in the Match Play Championship.

They swapped notes over lunch, and the shortest club either had was a 7-iron into the greens. Russell said players would be able to lift, clean and place their balls through the green

"I wish they'd play lift, clean and tee it up," Toms said. "The tough part is trying to find a dry

But this might be one tournament in which course conditions, while they might favor a longer hitter, probably won't be considered unfair. Match play isn't about the course, it's about the opponent.

players in the world, at that level. there's such a fine margin ... that it's hard to have that come out over 18 holes." Mickelson said. 'And because it's just 18 holes, it evens the entire playing field."

There is almost no point handi capping the field in this World Golf Championship. Woods is the two-time defending champion, and his 20-3 record in five appearances at La Costa is remarkable. Mickelson is the hottest player in golf, winning by five shots in Phoenix and four shots at Pehble Reach Singh is the No. 1 player in the world.

Woods faces Nick Price, who's playing for only the fifth time on the PGA Tour since the British Open last year, which contributed to his slide in the world ranking. He was No. 64 when the field was determined last week, facing the No. 2 seed (Woods) only because No. 3 Ernie Els decided not

Not that it would have mattered. If Els had come to La Costa, Price would have had to play Singh. And if someone else pulled out, he got Mickelson.

"If you look at my predicament . it's jumping out of the frying pan into the fire," Price said.

Still, a two-time PGA champion and former British Open champion isn't about to back down from anvone.

In an 18-hole match, the underdog always has the slight advantage from a mental point of view, because you've really got nothing to lose," Price said. "You just go out there and fire. I'm looking forward to it. I really am

It wouldn't seem like the Match Play Championship is all that hard to figure out, especially with Woods holding the trophy the past two years as the No. 1 seed.

Two years ago, Woods went to the final hole only once in six matches, had only five bogevs in 112 holes and his only scare came from Adam Scott of Australia. A vear ago. Woods was lucky to escane the first round, and even more fortunate to face players not at their best.

Was he good or lucky?

"Both," Woods said. "I've played matches where I've beaten my opponent, and there are match es when I stole one. I've been in the finals three times in this event, and I can't say I've played well in every single match. I've had my share where I haven't played well, but just well enough.'

Thursday Steven Ellis had 22 points, Stephen Th-ompson 18 and Marcus Carson 17, and the co-host Dragons overcame foul trouble to upend Seoul American 78-69 in the quarterfinals on their home floor. "It's someone else's turn," Kubasaki coach Chris Sullivan said afterward in a joyous Dragons locker room. "It feels good. The credit goes to the play-ers. They hustled, made shots that were important and never gave up, even when they were in foul trou-

When senior guard Vincent Hobbs sat with four fouls in the third period, Reggie Pearson came off the bench "to hit some big shots, grab some big rebounds and run the floor," Sullivan said. Thompson had three fouls at halftime, and Carson played the last three minutes with four fouls. The Dragons reached the semifinals for the second time in three years and avenged a loss to the Falcons in the 2003 final. It also meant a trip to Kadena High, where the Panthers lay in wait for a semifinal matchup. Kadena and Kubasaki split four regular-season games.

"I'm taking nothing for granted," Sullivan said.

How does a coach keep a team motivated after expending so much emotional energy bringing down a champion?

"It's going to be difficult," he said. "Everything from this point on could be anticlimatic. ... But they have good heads on their shoulders." Cougars conquer press, reach Girls Class A final again

This time. Osan American was ready for the St. Paul Christian press. And the Cougars' reward was a trip to Center Court for the fifth straight year in the Girls Class A tournament. After losing Monday in pool play 63-59 to the Warriors, a game in which Osan com-mitted 28 turnovers, the Cougars used a patient passing game, and continually fed 6-foot-4 center Margaret Nurse (33 points. 26 rebounds) and forward Mina Davis

(24-20) for easy layups. "We've been watching them from the beginning of the tournament," said Cougars senior guard Sharon Kroening. "This time. we had it planned out. Pass quicker instead of dribbling, which is the only way to break their press. And feed Margaret. She's the key to the game in a situation like this No team besides Osan has made it to the Class A finals five straight years, Osan won the title in 2001 and '02 before losing to Faith Academy of the Philippines in 2003 and International School of the Sacred Heart last year

Buzzer-beating shot gives Kinnick girls first win over Yokota this season

Unlike Seoul American's boys, the third time proved the charm for Kinnick's girls. Lualhati Johnson's half-court, three-point, buzzer-beating shot gave the Red Devils a 59-57 victory over Yokota, their first win in three tries against the Panthers this sea-

The win earned Kinnick the ton seed from Pool A and a first-round bye in the single-elimination playoffs.

"It was just like a championship game. It's never over with Yokota until the buzzer sounds," Kinnick coach Henry Falk said after Yokota rallied from five points down with 39 seconds left to tie. "Yokota is a heck of a team. That was the best game my girls have played all year."

The Devils weren't planning on celebrating too long.

"We know what happened to the boys," Falk said of Kinnick's boys, who lost in the first round of the playoffs in the Class AA tournament on Okinawa. "We're not in the semifinals vet. We're not in the ton four yet. We can beat anybody and anybody can beat us. It depends on who shows up to play on what day '

Osan boys scramble all the way to third

Osan's boys season, meanwhile, could be summed up in one word: injuries. Virtually from the start of the season to the Boys Class A tournament in Japan, the Cougars resembled an infirmary at times, playing the last two days of Far East with six healthy players.

Yet despite the adversity. Osan finished second in the Korean-American Interscho lastic Activities Conference's large-schools division, then placed third in Class A.

Their bid for a second Center Court appearance in three years came up short when the Cougars rallied from a 20-point deficit, only to come up three points short of St. Paul 55-52

Villanova's Randy Foye celebrates in the final minute against Boston College, Fove led with 23 points as Villanova won 76-70.

Villanova adds BC to ranked victims

By DAN GELSTON The Associated Press

VILLANOVA, Pa. - With big wins over ranked teams and a winning surge that has them streaking up the Big East standings, the Villanova Wildcats seem poised to return to the NCAA tournament

Still, coach Jay Wright is not resting easily.

"We really don't talk about that," Wright said, "We're very concerned about our regular season. It's so subjective. We go for our own goals.' Check beating the No. 2 and 3 teams in the country off the list.

Randy Foye scored 23 points and the 23rd-ranked Wildcats survived a nine-minute stretch without a field goal to beat No. 3 Boston College 76-70 on Wednesday night.

The enthusiastic fans stormed the court just as they have for two other home wins over Top 25 teams, chanted "Tournament!" and shook hands with Wright.

"We're learning how to win," Wright said.

The Wildcats (18-6, 8-5 Big East) beat their fourth Top 25 team of the year, including a win over then-No. 2 Kansas last month, and bolstered their chances of making their first NCAA tournament appearance since 1999

Villanova has won nine of 11 and moved into a three-way tie for fourth place with Pittsburgh and Georgetown in the conference standings. Boston College remained in first, one game ahead of Connecticut.

"We were confident we could come in and play well, but we're not thinking about the NCAAs," said Curtis Sumpter, scored 18 of his 20 points in the first half. Kyle Lowry added 11 points for the Wildcats. Craig Smith led a second-half rally for Boston College (22,2 11-2) and finished with 18 points while Jared Dudley had 15.

The Wildcats, coming off a win over then-No. 17 Pittsburgh on Sunday, used 70 percent Sunday, three-point shooting in the first half to take a halftime lead they stretched to 13 points early in the second half. When Jason Fraser made a layup at the 13:15 mark, Wildcats led 57-47 seemed in control.

The Eagles - who rallied from halftime deficits to win eight times this season — started their run while Villanova went into a field-goal drought.

Steve Hailey capped a 12-2 spurt with a three-pointer that pulled the Eagles to 62-60 with 6:23 left.

Foye banked a 6-footer for a 67-64 lead, ending the drought. The Wildcats never lost the lead thanks to 8-for-10 free-throw shooting during that span. They were 36-for-41 overall from the line "It's very difficult to win a game when the opposing team shoots 41 free throws," Boston College coach Al Skinner said 'We just didn't make the plays that were going to tie it and make them feel uncomfortable. We never got over the hump.

No, but they gave the Wildcats a scare.

Hailey pulled BC to 67-66 with a jumper, but fouled out on the next possession.

Fove pushed the lead to 73-68 with an arcing baseline jumper. Then, the Wildcats sealed it from

Devils stifle Jackets' momentum

ATLANTA - Even with B.J. Elder back, Georgia Tech can't seem to generate momentum to make a run for an NCAA tournament bid.

Elder made his second straight start after missing nine games at the start of the Atlantic Coast Conference schedule with a hamstring injury, but the senior who normally provides scoring leadership for the Yellow Jackets was held to two points in a 60-56 loss to No. 7 Duke on Wednesday night. Tech was 0-for-5 from three-point range, committed 19 turnovers and shot 29 percent from the field in the second half, wasting a strong defensive effort "I think the turnovers are put-roundup ting some pressure on us," Georgia Tech coach Paul Hewitt said. "The first half, in particular, we had some breakouts, and I thought if we could convert those, mentally and psychologically we could get into the flow a little bit. And then you're not squeezing the shot like it's the one The struggles have left Tech without consecutive wins since early January. Hewitt said Duke (20-4, 10-4 Atlantic Coast Conference) looks like a No. 1 seed in the NCAA tournament. One year after advancing to the NCAA championship game, Tech (15-9, 6-7) is not even assured of a bid

Tech which now faces road games at Miami and Wake Forest before closing its conference schedule at home against Clemson, needs an offensive lift to boost its postseason outlook.

Elder, who was 1-for-8 from the field, played just 4 minutes in the first half after picking up two fouls.

Junior Lee Melchionni delivered two late three-pointers to lift Duke.

With Tech focusing its defense on J.J. Redick, Melchionni snapped a 49-49 tie with a three-pointer from the corner with 3:15 left. He added another three with 1:26 left for a 57-52 lead

With Duke leading 57-54, Melchionni missed a shot from the top of the circle as the shot clock expired, but Daniel Ewing grabbed the rebound for the Blue Devils and was fouled with 31 seconds left. Duke guard Sean Dockery, who suffered a knee injury in the victory, is out indefinitely. Dockery, who played in Duke's first 24 games, tore the medial collateral ligament in his right knee, the school announced Thursday.

"We feel badly for Sean," coach Mike Krzyzewski said, "He was having a great year for us and was an integral part of the success we've enjoyed so far. He's one of our fighters."

Dockery started 19 times this season and has a scoring average of 6.5 points per game for the Blue Devils. He is shooting 48 percent from the floor, including 42.9 percent from three-point range.

No. 1 Illinois 84, Northwestern 48: Dee Brown scored 18 of his 20 points on three-pointers to lead the Illini (28-0, 14-0), who clinched at least a share of the Big Ten title for the second straight season. Brown had five threes in the first half as Illinois took a 45-22 lead. It was Illinois' 24th straight Big Ten win, and 20th in a row at Assembly Hall.

No. 5 Kentucky 81, Auburn 73: Kelenna Azubuike had career highs of 30 points and 11 rebounds for the Wildcats (21-3, 12-1 Southeastern Conference), who clinched at least a share of the East Division title for the sixth straight season.

No. 6 Wake Forest 88, Longwood 47: Taron Downey scored 13 points as the Demon Deacons (23-4) cruised to the nonconference home win.

Michael Jefferson scored 14 points for the Lancers (1-29), who extended their school-record losing streak to 18 games in their first full season of Division I competition.

No. 15 Syracuse 83. St. John's 69: Hakim Warrick had a career-high 35 points and grabbed 10 rebounds — his 12th double-double of the season and the Orange (23-5, 10-4 Big East) broke a game losing streak to give coach Jim Boeheim his 699th win

Daryll Hill had a career-high 33 points for the Red Storm (9-15, 3-11), who lost their 20th straight road game.

West Virginia 70, No. 18 Pittsburgh 66: Kevin Pittsnogle scored 20 of his 22 points in the second half and the visiting Mountaineers (17-8, 7-7 Big East) rallied from 14 points down to sweep the sea son series and win for the fifth time in six games overall Chevon Troutman had 15 points for the Panthers (18-6, 8-5), who didn't have a field goal in the final 7:26 in losing their second straight.

No. 21 Charlotte 80, Memphis 77: At Charlotte, N.C., Eddie Basden scored 24 points, including two free throws with 1.8 seconds to play, and the 49ers (20-4, 11-2) won their sixth straight and moved into a tie with Louisville for first place in Conference

Shaq has knee sprain, might play Saturday

MIAMI - Miami Heat All-Star center Shaquille O'Neal has a mildly sprained left knee and might play Saturday against Orlando the minutes of Tuesday's game in Chicago when he leaped to catch an alley-oop pass from Dwyane Wade and landed awkwardly atop Bulls forward Othella Harrington. O'Neal stayed on the court for several minutes, clearly

He didn't return to the game, and missed Wednesday's contest at Indiana. Miami, which leads the Eastern Conference with a 40-16 record, lost both games in overtime.

O'Neal, a 12-time All-Star, is averaging 22.7 points - on an NBA-best 59.9 percent from the field - and 10.4 rebounds this season. He has missed only two full games because of injuries this year, compared with 15 in each of his previous three seasons with the Los Angeles Lakers.

Robcats' White to miss rest of season with shoulder injury

lotte Bobcats center Jahidi White will undergo surgery on his injured right shoulder and miss the rest of the season, the team said Thursday

White had been on and off the injured list since hurting his shoulder Nov. 30 at New Jersey.

He appeared in 18 games this season, averaging 2.5 points and 2.0 rebounds. A seven-year veteran. White was chosen by the Bobcats from Phoenix in last June's expansion draft.

Also Thursday, the Bobcats said the Cleveland Cavaliers have lifted all conditions on a 2005 first-round draft pick that Charlotte acquired during the expansion draft. That guarantees the Bobcats at least two picks in the first round.

O'Neal sparks Pacers past Shaq-less Heat

BY STEVE HERMAN The Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS - Jermaine was the dominant O'Neal on Wednesday night. With injured Shaquille O'Neal watching from Miami's bench, Indiana's Jermaine O'Neal scored all three Pacers baskets in overtime, including a turnaround jumper from the baseline with 11 seconds remaining, in a 93-91 victory over the Heat. They may be a little more fluid without him in there," Jermaine O'Neal said.

"When he's there, it's a big challenge for the big guys. Without him, they do a lot of things they don't usually do. But I knew I could get a shot over whichever guys they O'Neal finished with 29 points, 14 rehounds and five blocked shots as the Pacers won their fourth straight and their 11th in a row over the Heat.

Shaquille O'Neal, who injured his knee in an overtime loss at Chicago on Tuesday night, on Thursday in Miami had an MRI that showed he has a mild knee sprain. He might be able to play against the Orlando Magic on Saturday. He was on the sideline Wednesday as the Eastern Confer-ence-leading Heat rallied from a 14-point icit in the second quarter.

Miami pulled to 66-63 after three quarters and caught the Pacers in the closing minutes of regulation.

"Tonight was a game I felt was going to be equally tough with or without Shaq Pacers coach Rick Carlisle said.

Indiana Pacers forward Jermaine O'Neal, left, hits the game-winning shot over Miami Heat's Udonis Haslem on Wednesday night.

"We were fortunate that Shaq was out, but you never want to see a guy that means this much to our league not playing," Carlisle said. "I know a lot of our fans were disappointed not to get a chance to see him. but these things happen. You hope you can pull it together and win. We did, and we're very pleased about that."

Dwyane Wade had 38 points, one point short of his career high set in November against Iltah and scored nine in the final eight minutes of the fourth quarter.

"We have two tough losses the last two nights, but if one play goes the other way, we're winning those games," Wade said. "We have a lot of confidence in ourselves and we know when Shag comes back, we

Two free throws by Jermaine O'Neal put Indiana ahead 87-85 with 32 seconds left, but Damon Jones scored on a goaltending call against O'Neal with 18 seconds to go. sending the game to overtime.

After O'Neal's first basket in the extra period, Miami took the lead 91-89 on a rebound tip by Udonis Haslem and two free throws by Wade O'Neal then tied the game at 91 and rebounded a miss by Wade to set up the winning basket.

"It was drawn up for me to go strong-side and then go weak-side and post up over Haslem." O'Neal said. "I had a couple of inches on him. From that side, it was just me and the backboard. I took the shot and made it."

A desperation shot by Wade went off the rim at the huzzer

"It felt good," Wade said, "I bobbled the ball a little bit and tried to get it off in time. It came up a little short.

Reggie Miller added 23 points for Indiana and Stephen Jackson finished with 13 points and 10 rebounds.

Jones had 17 points for the Heat, while

Haslem added 11 points and a career-high

18 rebounds. Miami coach Stan Van Gundy said Wade was phenomenal." "He was great, attacking, making plays, making jump shots. He was by far the best player on the floor." Wade, scoring in double figures for a career-high 31st straight game, was the focus of the Heat's offense with Shaq on the sideline. He had six early points as Miami jumped ahead 11-4 and five more the rest of the first quarter before the Pacers took

A three-pointer and two free throws by Miller tied the game, then O'Neal gave Indiana its first lead less than a minute later. There was one more lead change and one more tie before a pair of free throws by Jackson put the Pacers in front.

Jackson added a three-pointer and O'Neal scored on a dunk as the Pacers finished the quarter with a 10-3 run and a 27-21 lead

Indiana built the lead to 14 points midway through the second period before three baskets by Michael Doleac, who started in place of Shaq, keyed a 13-3 run that brought the Heat within four. A basket by O'Neal with a second remaining gave Indiana a 47-41 lead at halftime.

There were five lead changes and eight more ties before O'Neal's winning basket.

Trade: 76ers' Iverson gets help

TRADE, FROM BACK PAGE

"The message that we're sending is that we went out and got a player who's averaging 21 and 10 to go along with our young players," King said. "I think the way we play, it allows some of our vounger guys to develop even more because you've got a big guy now that can really make passes and shoot the jump shot."

The 76ers host the Kings on Saturday, and Philadelphia will play in Sacramento on March 28.

The Sixers are 26-27 and a half-game behind Boston for first place in the Atlantic Division. while the Kings have the NBA's seventh-best record at 34-20 heading out on a six-game road trip, their longest of the season.

Iverson, the NBA's leading scorer, claimed he didn't ask to be traded if the Sixers didn't make any bold moves to contend in a weakened Eastern Conference this year - but the All-Star Game believed the Sixers needed help to make a playoff push.

"If there's anything we need it's definitely a big man," he said Monday. "A big man would help us a lot, especially a big man that can rebound and block shots."

Webber the No. 1 overall nick in 1993 following a stellar career at Michigan, has played excentionally well for the Kings in reweeks, averaging 21.3 points, 9.7 rebounds and 5.5 assists ner game - though he isn't the athlete he was before knee

Williamson, a first-round draft pick by the Kings in 1995, played five years in Sacramento before being traded to Toronto for Doug Christie following the 1999-00 sea son. The NBA's top sixth man in 2001-02 with the Pistons. Williamson is averaging 10.8 points and 3.7 rebounds this season.

Thomas, an undersized power forward with a reliable jumper, fell out of favor with coach Jim O'Brien this season, while Skinner was a free-agent bust.

Barnes, a Sacramento native, has been a seldom-used reserve for the Kings this season, though he took Stojakovic's spot in the starting lineup recently. Bradley was acquired earlier in the season in Sacramento's deal for Moblev. but hasn't played much.

In other deals made Thursday before the NBA trade deadline:

■ The New York Knicks agreed to two deals to acquire Malik Rose and two No. 1 picks from San Antonio and forward Maurice Taylor from Houston.

The Taylor trade received league approval about three hours after the 3 p.m. EST deadline, but the Rose deal was not immediately finalized.

The Knicks would send starting center Nazr Mohammed and backup point guard Jamison Brewer to the Spurs for Rose and ■ Antoine Walker is coming back to Boston after the Celtics agreed to trade Gary Payton, Tom Gugliotta and Michael Stewart to Atlanta.

The Hawks will also get a future first-round draft spokesman Arthur Triche said Thursday. The trade was pending league approval.

Walker spent seven years with the Celtics from 1996-2003, helping them reach the Eastern Conference finals in 2001-02. But basketball boss Danny Ainge decided after taking over the team during the 2003 postseason that it would be better off without its strongest all-around player and its strongest personality.

The Celtics traded guard Jiri Welsch to the Cleveland Cava-liers for a 2007 first-round draft

The 25-year-old Welsch has made 32 of 99 three-pointers this and is averaging 7.5 points, 2.5 rebounds and 20.5 minutes per game.

■ The Golden State Warriors acquired guard Baron Davis from the New Orleans Hornets for guard Speedy Claxton and forward Dale Davis

Baron Davis, a two-time All-Star who finished sixth in the NBA in scoring last season, will form a potent backcourt combination with Jason Richardson in Golden State. He has missed 36 games this season while struggling with several minor injuries, but still is considered one of the league's top point guards.

When healthy, Van Horn would provide Dallas with another scorer, especially when star Dirk

Problem is, Van Horn isn't always healthy. He's been hobbled often in his 10-year career, the latest problem being tendinitis in his right ankle that has kept him out of 19 games this season.

Kings move forward

Sacramento ships Webber to 76ers, gets little in return

The Associated Pres

The Kings will find out whether they're really a better team without their cornerstone, and the Philadelphia 76ers will learn whether another superstar can thrive alongside Allen Iverson.

The Kings dealt Webber to the Sixers late Wednesday night in a six-player deal that dramatically reshaped both clubs on the eve of the trade deadline.

Philadelphia got Webber, one of the NBA's elite power forwards and a five-time All-Star, along with reserve forwards Matt Barnes and Michael Bradley. The Sixers gave up relatively little in return, sending veteran forwards Corliss Williamson, Kenny Thomas and Brian Skinner to the Kings.

On Thursday, the 76ers completed their second trade in two days, sending forward Glenn Robinson to the New Orleans Hornets for Jamal Mashburn and Rodney Rogers.

Robinson and Mashburn have yet to play for their teams this year. Mashburn has a knee injury and might never play again.

Robinson, earning more than $12 million in the final year of his contract, is on the injured list with left ankle tendinitis, though he's been unhappy since losing his starting forward spot in training camp.

"We knew what we wanted to do if we were going to move him," Sixers President Billy King said. "If this deal with Rodney didn't come about, we were not going to do a deal just to be moving Glenn."

Rogers can become a free agent at the end of the year. His three-point shooting fits nicely with coach Jim O'Brien's offensive philosophy, but Rogers is only averaging 9.3 points and shooting just 27.5 percent from three-point range.

Webber's departure from Sacramento has been discussed nearly since the moment Geoff Petric acquired him from Washington before the 1999 season. The Kings' president of basketball operations rebuilt the small-marker Kings around Webber, transforming the franchise from a perennial loser to a club with six straight winning seasons and two division titles.

The Sacramento Kings traded forward Chris Webber (4) to the Philadelphia 76ers in a six-player deal on Wednesday. Philadelphia was seeking help for its star Allen Iverson before the NBA trade deadline.

"He has been an instrumental part of ushering in an era of basketball here in Sacramento that most of the world at that time did not believe could happen," Petrie said late Wednesday night.

"I don't think myself or anyone in this organization could thank him enough."

Petrie was typically vague about his reasons for the deal, citing only "flexibility and versatility," but Webber is due to make $62 million over the next three seasons — and Petrie clearly is among the NBA observers who believe Sacramento's up-tempo passing offense will be even better without Webber in the middle.

Peja Stojakovic, Brad Miller and Mike Bibby all thrived last season while Webber recovered from knee surgery — but all three stars regressed when Webber raturned. Though both Webber and Stojakovic denied rumors of a rift between them, Stojakovic demanded a trade from the Kings And though Webber had the best years of his career in Sacramento, the forward with the megawatt smile and larger-than-life personality always longed for a bigger stage — even after the Kings re-signed him to a seven-year deal worth approximately $127 million in 2001.

In Philadelphia, Webber will get the national attention he always craved — and Iverson will get some of the help he has always wanted.
